Making Music

The Legacy of Elizabeth Jones Romans

by Kelly Leavitt

Elizabeth Romans passed away on June 29 of this year, but the musical legacy she created will carry on. The newly-named “Roman Singers” are a group of musicians and singers who have met every Thursday for the last five years in Elizabeth’s home to sing old-time gospel hymns. The Appalachian heritage and uplifting nature of these old hymns have led to their sustained popularity, even as we approach the year 2020. This group of singers, which is always growing, all credit Elizabeth for being the impetus for something they greatly enjoy.

The group started one day when Elizabeth and her good friend Dorothy Crow went by Mentone Town Hall. Former town clerk Wilma Fletcher explains: “Elizabeth and Dorothy came by one day and asked me if I was going to play music with my good friend Gene Ivey. I said no, because Gene was very sick and didn’t have much longer to live. Elizabeth said, ‘Well, come to my house. So, I did, because you never did tell Elizabeth, ‘No.’ Dorothy and Elizabeth and I made music, and the three of us enjoyed it so much we never stopped, we just kept going back every Thursday. A few other people heard about it and they wanted to come, so that’s how the group grew.”

“Elizabeth was such a talented musician, as well as Dorothy,” Wilma said. “They just made friends wherever they went. You would not find a better singer than Dorothy.”

I spoke with several members of the singing group by one day and asked me if I was going to play music with my good friend Gene Ivey. I said no, because Gene was very sick and didn’t have much longer to live. Elizabeth said, ‘Well, come to my house. So, I did, because you never did tell Elizabeth, ‘No.’ Dorothy and Elizabeth and I made music, and the three of us enjoyed it so much we never stopped, we just kept going back every Thursday. “Elizabeth was such a talented musician, as well as Dorothy,” Wilma said. “They just made friends wherever they went. You would not find a better singer than Dorothy.”

I spoke with several members of the singing group, including Amelia Lolli and Nelson Stallings, who both credit Elizabeth for being the impetus for something they greatly enjoy.

Photographer John Dersham to Speak at Moon Lake Library

Award-winning photographer John Dersham has released a new book, My Alabama: John Dersham Photographs a State, a selection of 200 images of the state from Dersham’s vast catalog of over 50,000. These photographs offer a unique and stunning portrait of Alabama’s diverse natural, topographical, and cultural assets. The book, which carries a foreword by Bo Jackson, was published in May 2019 with the support of the Alabama Bicentennial Commission.

My Alabama is organized seasonally. Dersham shares a journey with readers from a warm, green Alabama spring on the Cahaba River to a summer evening on Cherokee County’s Weiss Lake. Throw on a coat on a frosty morning and find one of the state’s many waterfalls, like Pigsah Gorge Falls, or wander a path on the snow-covered Lookout Mountain. Readers move past breathtaking landscapes, scenic village crossroads with rustic country stores, and gleaming cityscapes shining in the evening light. From Guntersville Lake to the peaks of Monte Sano, from the port of Mobile to rural St. Clair County, Dersham captures the astonishing varied beauty of the Yellowhammer State in every shot.

John Dersham’s art photography and commercial work has been featured in gallery and other exhibits nationwide, and he is an experienced photography instructor and speaker. His love of photography was developed during the 30 years he spent working at Kodak. Today, Dersham is president of DeKalb Tourism in Fort Payne. John Dersham will present an Author Talk and book signing at Moon Lake Community Library on Monday evening, August 12, at 6:30. This free multi-media program is suitable for all ages. Refreshments will be served and books will be available for purchase.
Mentone Matters • by Mayor Rob Hammond

The campers have returned home and students will soon be returning to school (too soon?). This summer has flown by. Susan Rutland (her parents are Ann and the late Goodloe Rutland, who have had a place in Mentone for years) and Brian Farrell were at the last council meeting and presented their preliminary plans for the Mentone Springs Hotel site. They envision a four-story hotel with 36 rooms and 10 condo units. The hotel would have a restaurant with a capacity of 80. It would be constructed of stone and timber in the Tudor style and be called Second Wind. Plans could change. The town looks forward to working with the Farrells on this project.

The Curler Avenue project is not yet complete. Bolt Construction still has 400 feet of pipe to install. Unfortunately this section is all rock and they are seeking additional equipment.

Work on the bridge has moved to the west side of the river and is progressing. Ladd Environmental and ALDOT continue to iron out details on the sidewalk project.

Letter from the Editor

I hope you all have enjoyed this summer as much as I have. We’ve had an abundance of cool evenings, and even cooler mornings, with fairly dry air. It’s been a joy. I’ve thought often of the local children and the visiting campers who have had such pleasant days during their summer vacation. The water quality of Little River has been consistently good, making for enjoyable water activities.

The songs of the cicadas and the tree frogs have charmed me, as always. On some evenings, it’s been a challenge to carry on a conversation outside because the sounds of the woods have been so...loud.

One evening a few years ago, I was sitting on our back deck, listening to the bugsong, when suddenly the rhythm shifted, and I heard what sounded like a distant choir of women voices singing the old Appalachian song, Down in the River to Pray, complete with harmonies. I was stunned, excited, confused… Was I imagining this? I decided to record it, as I had my phone at my side, and when I played back the recording, the song was more subtle, but it was there. After about 45 seconds, the rhythm of the bugsong shifted again, and normalcy returned.

A couple of weeks ago, I had the same experience while sitting by a large pond where all the critters were virtually screaming their songs—it was extremely loud. I began hearing male voices singing a kind of African hymn off to the right, which was then countered by male voices singing a variance of the song off to the left. It didn’t last long. But it got me thinking.

I wonder if the tunes, hymns, and songs that began with the mountain folk of Appalachia and the African-American slaves of the South (and that have carried on through many generations) represent our ancestors’ attunement to the natural sounds that surrounded them? Long before the age of electricity, the people who lived close to the earth listened to the songs of the woods. As they developed ways to play instruments, and as they became more organized with written tunes, I wonder if they were mimicking the nightly sounds around them.

When I recently attended one of the Thursday singings of the Roman Singers, I pondered this further, as the harmonies and flat keys reminded me of this possible (probable?) connection. The rhythms of nature are a powerful force, and I’m glad this relatively temperate summer season has allowed us to spend so many evening hours outside, away from the din of devices and the hum of electricity.

May you all enjoy the music in your life, wherever it comes from. —Kelly
Documentary Premieres in Mentone
by Holley Midgley

About 325 people turned out on July 6 for the premiere of Mentone: Where Little River Runs, the video documentary that chronicles the history of our town. At the time of screening, the program was about 95% complete, and editing is continuing through the end of July.

The documentary covers a range of topics including how Lookout Mountain was formed, the Native Americans who inhabited this area, the natural splendor that has attracted people over the years, and the people who lived and worked here to create the town. Also covered are such notables with Mentone connections as Martha Berry and Congressman Miles Allgood.

The final version of the documentary will be mass duplicated. In late August, a complimentary copy will be sent to each mailbox or post office box in the Mentone post office coverage routes. Plans are to make additional copies available for free (while they last) at Town Hall. Because of grant restrictions, no sales of the program are permitted. However, the final version will be posted on YouTube, and links will be placed on the websites of several local organizations. Please look for additional information in future issues of The Groundhog.

Mentone: Where Little River Runs is being funded from several sources, and no town money has been used. This project is supported by a grant from the Alabama Humanities Foundation, a state partner with the National Endowment for the Humanities; The Mentone Area Preservation Association (MAPA); the Menlo-Tillotson Foundation; and the Alabama Bicentennial Commission.

Susan Noel Retires from Teaching by Kelly Leavitt

Susan Noel recently celebrated her retirement from a 33-year-long career as a teacher, primarily at Menlo School in Georgia. She grew up in Fort Payne and graduated from the University of Montevallo with a degree in Fine Arts.

“I didn’t want to be a teacher, but my father wanted me to be one,” Susan explained. “When my mother had a massive stroke, I came back here to help care for her, and someone convinced me to try substitute teaching. I found out I loved it, a lot, so I went back to school at Jacksonville State University to become a teacher.”

Susan was hired by Menlo Principal Ed Thompson and she taught hands-on science for 25 years, as well as reading and social studies to grades 1 through 8. She also taught gifted classes for several years.

“Ed Thompson had the ability to pull people in who were truly gifted teachers,” Susan said, “and they taught me to teach, certainly more than school did. When I was teaching gifted classes, I had to go to another school, and it dawned on me later, because I had come from teaching and subbing and had seen a lot of situations, that it was beyond the ordinary how good the teachers at Menlo School were. They were phenomenal.

“Menlo is a very community-oriented school,” Susan said. “I loved teaching the children of children I had taught, and eventually I was teaching the great-grandchildren of some of my students. I particularly loved the children and watching them grow. In 6th grade, they’d come in and they’re still so young. By the end of 6th grade, they’re into a new stage of development. And I loved observing them when something clicked for them. I will miss the children. I don’t have children, and my students were like my children for a year.”

Susan now plans to spend her time building a house on property that’s been in her family for a long time. “Once my house is built,” she said, “I plan to travel. I hope to go to Europe again. I went to London once with a friend and I loved it. I’m also looking forward to spending a lot of time volunteering in the Mentone community.”
The July 9th meeting of the Rhododendron Garden Club was held in the MERF House at 10 o’clock. Hostess Marsha Merrell provided refreshments and for the meditation, Sharon Harris read an article about the praying mantis, the carnivorous insect that is named for its prominent long legs, which are bent and held together at an angle, suggesting a position of prayer.

President Marsha Merrell called the meeting to order. During roll call, each member was asked to name a flower they are deadheading. The answers varied from Hosta, Petunias, Dahlias, Zinnias, Roses, and Penstemon. Members were also asked to name a favorite way to protect themselves from the sun and insects. The most popular answer was wearing a white shirt with long sleeves, but commercial protectants were also mentioned, along with scarves and spraying on a natural lavender concoction to keep bugs away.

For the Horticulture Report, Martha Wood handed out a quiz she received while taking an Environmental Studies course (offered through Harris read an article about the praying mantis, the carnivorous insect that is named for its prominent long legs, which are bent and held together at an angle, suggesting a position of prayer. Marsha reported that the butterfly houses are finished (thanks to community member Buddy Cole) for the students at Moon Lake Elementary School and will be delivered once school is back in session this month for the students to paint, decorate, and display in the school’s garden area. Marsha also reported that the schedule for the upcoming Flower Show at the DeKalb County Fair is nearly finished and will be distributed via e-mail when it is complete.

As there was no new business to discuss, the business portion of the meeting adjourned, and member Dee Kelley presented her program on Eastern Bluebirds and Bluebird boxes.

The Eastern Bluebird is a darling little bird from the thrush family. Their pretty blue feathers, however, are a bit of a deception. They actually lack blue pigment. Instead, each feather barb has a thick layer of cells that absorb all wavelengths of color except blue. Only the blue wavelength is reflected and scattered, resulting in their blue appearance to our eyes. (Watchable Wildlife)

These lovely birds prefer open grasslands, meadows, and farms to wooded areas. They require cavities for nesting and will readily use a hand-made nest box placed in your backyard.

Dee brought along two bluebird boxes to show us and shared some pointers from “The Bluebird Book: The Complete Guide to Attracting Bluebirds” (Stokes) in building and placing them around the yard.

Bluebird boxes should be made with a light-colored wood such as pine or cedar, at least ¾-inch thick. They don’t need a perch, as this might encourage house sparrows, fierce competitors of the bluebird. The entrance hole should be 1-½ inches in diameter and the floor should be 4 x 4 inches. The height from the top of the floor to the bottom of the entrance hole should be about 5 to 7 inches. It makes it easiest to clean if the opening is on the side or front, and easiest to monitor if the box opens from the top.

Ventilation holes should be drilled at the top of the sides or the back, or gaps should be left between the roof and sides, and drainage holes should be drilled in the floor or the space between the floor and the sides. The roof should overhang the entrance hole by at least 1 to 2 inches to keep out rain and shade the entrance. Attaching the box to a tree or post should be easy.

The Bluebird box should be placed at least five feet above ground, facing away from prevailing winds, and toward open landscape, so they can easily find food. They’re great friends for your garden, as they feed on grasshoppers, crickets, caterpillars and spiders. To encourage bluebird nesting, you can provide a heated bird bath nearby, and have a feeder filled with mealworms, raisins, or grapes.

A fun way to monitor Bluebird activity is to become part of a Bluebird trail, or, if you have property with plenty of wide-open spaces, create a trail of your own. Information and plans for building Bluebird boxes and Bluebird trails is available at alabamawildlife.org/uploadedFiles/File/Example_Bird_Nesting_Box_Trail_D32116.pdf

The August meeting will be held at the MERF House on Tuesday, August 13, at 10 a.m. Mellanie Tuttle and Martha Wood will help us prepare for the Flower Show in September.

Tips for Attending the World’s Longest Yard Sale!

by Doreen Crow Waters

The World’s Longest Yard Sale begins Thursday, August 1, and ends Saturday, August 3. The route goes directly through the heart of Mentone, so here are some tips to help you have a safe and enjoyable adventure, especially if you’re visiting:

1. Bring CASH. Most vendors will not be equipped to accept debit/credit cards, and many will not accept checks from folks who are not local. Make sure you include plenty of small bills and plenty of change.

2. Prepare for the WEATHER. The forecast is for the mid-80s, with a reasonable chance of rain. Pack a hooded raincoat and proper footwear for walking in muddy areas. Wear loose-fitting, light-colored clothing, a hat, and sunglasses.

3. Limited RESTROOMS are available. In our small town, we have septic tanks instead of sewer drains. Consequently, homes and businesses are unable to handle large volumes of restroom visitors. Most businesses do not offer public restrooms, except for restaurants who offer restrooms to their customers only. There will be portable outdoor facilities available in several locations in town, including the Mentone Inn, the Wildflower Café, the Mentone Market, and the Log Cabin Village.

4. Take care of your PETS. If you must bring your pet along, make sure the pet is wearing a collar with tags, including your contact information. Keep the pet on a leash at all times. Carry plenty of water for them. Sadly, many pets get separated from their owners during the sale, so the smartest thing to do is to leave them at home.

5. Be very cautious when DRIVING. Be prepared to stop quickly. Often, visitors like to shop from their cars to decide whether to stop at a sale, which slows traffic considerably. Pedestrians often walk into traffic while crossing the road to attend sales. Relax, drive slowly, and keep an eye out for pedestrians and pets.

6. Pack SNACKS and DRINKS. It’s important to keep hydrated! The restaurants will be filled to capacity most of the time, so the wait could be lengthy. We have two beautiful public parks in Mentone, perfect for picnics! Brow Park offers incredible views from the bluff, and Mason Park is right in the center of town with plenty of cool shade. Both parks have picnic tables and seating.

7. Have FUN!

Hope these tips help you enjoy the adventure of the World’s Longest Yard Sale! It’s a great chance to meet new people, pick up some great bargains, and find those treasures you never knew you needed.

Elizabeth Romans was born in 1924, into a family that loved playing music. Elizabeth's mother, Maude Jones, played the pump organ. Her father, Hardy, would bring the piano from Camp DeSoto to their house when camp closed each year. Elizabeth took a natural liking to the piano, and learned by playing it during the months it was in their home.

Kathy McMunn tells the story of how Elizabeth first learned to play the guitar, which she played throughout her life. "One day when Elizabeth was still in elementary school, her older brother, Colquitt, borrowed a guitar and brought it home in the afternoon. He had to go out to the fields to work, but first he showed her how to play the C, F and G chords. He said, 'You practice these chords while I go out to work and when I get home, we'll make music after supper.' That afternoon, she practiced and when he got home, he played his fiddle and she was able to play along with him. She was a good guitarist, and she was a good pianist, both."

In later years (long before the interstate), Elizabeth and Colquitt would travel to the radio station in Gadsden, and she played guitar while her brother played violin on air. Their sister, Mary Louise, was also an accomplished piano player.

"When she retired in 1982, she returned to Montone and lived in her childhood home," the same home where she welcomed people to the Thursday singings. “Elizabeth always welcomed anybody and everybody who walked in the door,” said Cathie Crow. “It was always fine, whether she knew them or not."

"After her return to Montone, according to her obituary, ‘She loved to ‘run the roads’ with her cronies and spread the town news.’ Her friends I spoke with consistently called her “a real character, very likable. Her friends I spoke with consistently called her "a real character, very likable.’"

Elizabeth regularly attended the Senior Lunches which are hosted by MERF at the Montone Community House. After lunch, she would play a few gospel songs on the piano while the others sang together. "She never would offer to play," MERF executive director Sarah Wilcox said. "I would have to ask her to play, every time. I think she liked being coaxed," Sarah said with a chuckle.

"Coaxing was something Elizabeth herself did well. Cathie Crow, who currently plays the piano for the Thursday singing group, said, “She got me playing the piano again. I had quit for about 10 years, but she kept encouraging me to come, and then to play, telling me how good it was and encouraging me. She's been a real blessing.”

Jan Wilkinson recalled her own gratitude for Elizabeth's encouragement. "She heard I played cello and asked me to come and bring my cello with me. I didn’t at first because I was totally intimidated by very good musicians. I was a late bloomer in learning how to play the cello. I started taking lessons when I was 62, and after about 10 years, I fell off playing it. Well, she ‘reprimanded’ me and had me bring it the next week. It has been a joy ever since. She has been an inspiration and I thank her daily for encouraging me to get back on the cello and play music with people who love to play and sing."

“Elizabeth always called me Fiddle Man,” said Mickey Luck, who explained that he had to learn how to play his fiddle in flat keys to play the gospel hymns. "She was quite a character, very likable. She would kid with you a lot. She would just say what she had to say.”

Nelson Stallings, Elizabeth's good friend since childhood, concurs: "She was a very unique person. She was so plain in her vocabulary. She would ask you whatever you thought, and tell you whatever she thought. She didn’t hold back.”

"Elizabeth was the most colorful friend I think I’ve ever had,” said Wilma Fletcher. “She was just an amazing lady. Anyone who knew about her from Erlanger would let you know quickly that she ran the show. She cared so much for people, deeper than (continued on page 17)
MERF News
by Sarah Wilcox

The Mentone Educational Resources Foundation (MERF) is grateful for the many people and organizations that believe in the work being done in Mentone. On May 22, the Harland Jones Fund at the Community Foundation in Anniston chose MERF as a grant recipient this next year to provide Arts Education to all ages and to provide free tutoring to the local students.

“To enrich the learning and living in the community by identifying needs and coordination resources” is MERF’s mission, but it is also exemplified in our new friends, the Norwoods, at “A Little Something Extra” Ice Cream. MERF loves how they have identified a need and coordinated resources, so the ice cream truck was invited as MERF’s guest to Moon Lake Community Library’s summer social on Saturday, July 20. MERF wanted to thank all those who came to the social with a free treat from the “A Little Something Extra” ice cream truck. Anthony Norwood and his son, Hunter, the Ice Cream Expert (and big Auburn fan) served the Mentone community well with delicious Blue Bunny ice cream treats, such as Chips Galore Sandwich, Jolly Rancher Rainbow snow cones, Strawberry Shortcake, and Cookies ‘n Cream bars! Perfect for an afternoon of fun!

I enjoyed hearing from Anthony how this vision of an ice cream truck business kept waking his wife, Michelle, up at 2 a.m. every morning. Then, as they started looking into the feasibility of truly developing a business to teach social skills, life skills, and employment skills for amazing people with intellectual and physical exceptionabilities, such as their son, Hunter, God kept opening the doors. How could they not proceed and see where this adventure would take them? The pieces kept falling into place, as they found equipment at below-value prices, as well as the perfect ice cream company to partner with. Anthony is amazed by how their food vendor encourages and works with them to supply the right treats. The snow cones are a big hit at the ball fields! The mobile ice cream unit’s purpose also strives to teach awareness, acceptance, and individual ability to every customer. I hope this was accomplished on that Saturday.

Hunter, the CEO, has been the “Ice Cream Expert” both times I’ve enjoyed their treats this summer. But just as the Norwoods didn’t want their son’s potential wasted, the company has 17 other “Ice Cream Experts”—employees who have been trained and certified to serve! I look forward to being served by more of these great employees. Michelle is also a special education teacher at Crossville when she is not manning the ice cream truck. If you didn’t get a treat because you missed the summer social, you may have caught the Norwoods on WHNT channel 19 in Huntsville on July 2, National Ice Cream Day! Treat yourself and follow them on Facebook! Thank you to “A Little Something Extra” for joining us at our community event and teaching us to smile a little more and enjoy the everyday!

On July 17, Paula Easter offered a great felting class which will be repeated in August or early September, if there is any interest—just let MERF know. Art class was followed by a sandwich lunch and brownie ice cream—yum! Thank you to Mildred’s Meadow Farm for supplying MERF with fresh tomatoes and cucumbers to enjoy with our sandwiches!

August means school is here, after we survive the World’s Longest Yard Sale!! MERF is a volunteer-based organization, so volunteers will be needed again for MERF’s after-school tutoring program and senior lunches starting in mid-September. Volunteer tutors commit to one day a week to work with the same student for the entire school year. Tutor subs are also needed, if you cannot make a weekly commitment. Senior lunches need volunteers to provide a lunch or come help with setup and clean-up. If either of these opportunities interests you, contact Sarah at merf.mentone@gmail.com or 256-635-8193.

Sadly, on June 29, MERF said goodbye to another one of our original lunch bunch crew and piano player extraordinaire, Elizabeth Romans. I can see her now at the piano in her yellow “Leave Me in Mentone” sweatshirt, leading us all in great singing, or telling me what I need to do! I am thankful for her friendship and her sassy ways.

Sarah Wilcox is Executive Director of MERF, a local non-profit organization whose mission is “to enrich the learning and living of the community by identifying needs and coordinating resources.” If you would like to support our programs, tax-deductible donations can be mailed to P.O. Objective: Deliver Sequoyah (molds) safely to Bronzart Foundry in Sarasota, Fla., for bronze casting.

Sixty hours, 1,236 miles later (with two teenager “helpers” in tow)—Mission Accomplished!

After spending the better part of two days in late June trying to secure affordable shipping rates for the already crated molds of Sequoyah, I was ready to pull my hair out. To figure density rates, I needed the weight rounded to the nearest pound (impossible without scales) and the best estimates from various freight companies were between $784 and $1,200.

I did a little figuring of my own and decided even with car rental, gas and two nights in a hotel, I could get the molds there much cheaper—if not faster.

I called my 17-year-old son Caden and 19-year-old daughter Ansley. I told them if they wanted to ride to Sarasota with me and Sequoyah, I was offering meals (at my expense) and as much beach time as they could squeeze between 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 25 (delivery at foundry), and 11 a.m. Wednesday, June 26 (departure for home).

Gotta love teenagers. They were up for the sun-and-surf challenge.

Artists Carl McCleskey and Besty Scott are gifting their work on Sequoyah sculpture to the Mentone Arts & Cultural Center (MACC) to be displayed in the outdoor Dr. Stephen Brewer Sculpture Garden at the southwest corner of the facility. We will have to secure funding for the bronze casting. (Any business or individual who wants to sponsor the sculpture, please contact me by email or at the number below.)

The garden is designated an “Open Spaces, Sacred Places” garden and its creation will be paid for by a $10,000 grant from the Community Foundation of Northeast Alabama.

Sequoyah, or (George Gist/George Guess as he called himself in English) was a Cherokee Indian who completed his independent creation of a Cherokee syllabary while living in nearby Willstown (now Fort Payne) around 1821. His syllabary made reading and writing in Cherokee possible. After seeing its value, the people of the Cherokee Nation rapidly began to use his syllabary and officially adopted it in 1825.

Needless to say, having the Sequoyah artwork—created by two renowned local artists—on permanent display is an honor. I feel the same way about having a small part in delivering it for casting. My kids also thought it was pretty cool and gave him the honor of not putting any luggage in his hallowed area in the back of the SUV.

They did take pictures with the Sequoyah sculpture cutout (Ansley serving as his non-existent surrogate legs) at the hotel in Tallahassee and again when we arrived at the foundry.

After touring the foundry, we all bid Sequoyah a warm adieu—more of a see-you again-soon.

Cost for getting Sequoyah to foundry—$429.22. Sharing the experience with my kids who understood its greater meaning—PRICELESS!

SENIOR HEALTH

Help for Medicare Part D Patients in the Coverage Gap

by Lynn Hixon

By this time of year, many people find they are in the coverage gap (donut hole) with their Medicare Part D coverage for their prescription drugs. You may think that there is no hope for you until you have paid your way out, but there is hope available thru the Senior Rx program. We can act as the go-between you, your doctor, and the drug companies to help you receive free medications. Many drug companies will offer free name brand drugs once a patient has met certain income eligibilities and out of pocket spend down requirements. Some drug companies will furnish free name brand drugs even if the patient has a Medicare drug card! You may also qualify for extra help through Social Security. Call DiAnne with the Senior Rx program or Lynn with the SHIP program at the DeKalb County Council on Aging at 256-845-8590 to see if you qualify.

Happy Day!
KNOCK, KNOCK! Who's there? Mentone. KNOCK, KNOCK! Who's there? Mentone. It's one of those almost secret places in Mentone; sort of in the back of beyond (no traffic; you'll have to quit the road at a dead-end). East River Rd. Nice tree-line (planted in the 70's). Public water & power available; paved road. $39,000 (1095291)

NEED A BIT OF EARTH? Here it is! Less than 5 minutes from downtown Mentone. Public water & power avail. A single acre, unrestricted, has been very hard to find in this area until now. $27,500. (1109345)

LIBBY LANE. It's one of those very last remaining 100' x 150' lots, 1/4 mile from the river. $13,000. (1055837)
The late Harry Reid was an artist from Selma, AL, who spent summers at the family home on Cutler Avenue in Mentone. He painted this watercolor of the old covered bridge that used to cross Little River, connecting West and East River Roads. The bridge collapsed in 1945. The painting has been owned by the Clay Stiles family for many years.
Thanks to everyone who came to our Summer Social on Saturday, July 20! The day started out rainy, so we gathered in the library, socializing, playing games, and eating pie. We had quite a large and cheerful crowd.

Thanks to MERF’s Sarah Wilcox for being such a great supporter. She brought ‘bubble baseball’ which was a bit hit and, once it was bit drier outside, she organized a 3-legged race on the MERF lawn. AND, on behalf of MERF, she arranged for an ice cream truck, with complimentary cold treats for everyone!

On August 3, we’ll be having a pop-up book sale at the Mentone Farmer’s Market between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Please stop by to say “Hi” and see if any books catch your eye. All proceeds benefit your community library.

Moon Lake Book Club 8/17 @ 10:30 am

Join fellow book lovers on for a discussion of The Radium Girls: The Darl Story of America’s Shining Women by Kate Moore. The book tells the true story of early 20th-century American women who were hired to paint watch dials with a luminous and deadly substance. The story is historically informative, unsettling, and, ultimately, inspiring.

Community Game Nights

Fridays, 8/9 & 8/23 @ 6 pm

More fun evenings are in store as we gather around the game tables. Bring your favorite game or come learn how to play a new one.

Games are good for your brain, and playing them with others is good for your spirit. Bring a finger food to share in the pot luck. Coffee, tea and water will be provided. All ages are welcome.
I n late summer, Little River begins to turn brown due to dissolved organic matter and slower river flow. As vegetation decays, tannins leach into the water making it darker in color and more acidic. The brown coloration of the water is similar to what happens when we make tea. This does not necessarily mean it is dirty or unsafe for swimming. Leaf litter is one of the most abundant contaminants resulting from stormwater runoff. Each fall, millions of deciduous trees put on an amazing show of autumn color and then drop all their leaves. Some savvy gardeners turn them into mulch and compost, but much of that biomass is captured by the forest floor where it decomposes giving nutrients back to the soil. However, some of it gets washed or blown into the ditches and storm drains, then into our creeks, rivers and lakes. When all of that biomass hits at once the nutrient load is high. Aquatic plants thrive on nutrients but when the load is too high, explosive growth can occur which is then followed by rapid decay at the end of the plant’s growth cycle which results in depleted oxygen levels. Like most living things aquatic animals die without oxygen. Soil Erosion is another problem that also depletes O2 levels. Silt fills spaces in between and under rocks destroying habitat for small aquatic animals that are critical food sources for larger aquatic animals. Soil erosion and high nutrient loads are issues we see in the Little River Watershed. At times we see large amounts of soil erosion or sediment pollution due to land development, logging and county roads that haven’t been maintained properly. Because most of Little River has a shallow riverbed and because rare and endemic aquatic and plant species live in this unique habitat, pollution from erosion can create severe and irreversible negative impacts.

Rains bring higher E-coli levels

It is half-way through our SwimGuide Season and the water in Little River is MOSTLY really clean! Our waterlogged selves can also attest, the water is perfect!! Samples have been collected during varied weather conditions. Because of this, we have seen some high E. coli levels as a result. This is a result in stormwater runoff. Lookout Mountain has seen some gully washers over the past few weeks! This large amount of rain in a very short amount of time can result in some very turbid (muddy) water! The runoff can carry animal droppings on the ground into local streams, causing elevated E. coli concentrations. The soil can also contain bacteria and other contaminants that can make you sick. The E. coli Bacteria is killed by sunlight (UV specifically), so having low water clarity reduces the chances that bacteria in the water will be exposed to sunlight and die. With that said, please use caution when swimming within a 24-hour period after a rain event, especially if you have open cuts or a compromised immune system. We encourage everyone to follow our weekly updates on littleriverwaterkeeper.org or TheSwimGuide.org to make sure your area is safe to swim in.

Little River Wild & Scenic Designation

Alabama has approximately 77,242 miles of river, of which only 61.4 miles of one river is designated as wild & scenic—less than 1/10th of 1% of the state’s river miles. The West Fork of the Sipsey Fork of the Black Warrior River is located in the Bankhead National Forest and shockingly, is the ONLY Wild & Scenic River in our water rich state of Alabama. The Little River Waterkeeper is working with the Alabama Rivers Alliance in order to nominate and designate parts of Little River as Wild & Scenic. We feel that creating the argument will be somewhat easy however, it will take an official act of the US Congress to make it a reality. Little River spans the Dekalb and Cherokee County borders along Lookout Mountain and is the perfect choice for the region’s next Wild and Scenic River. Thousands of visitors each year come to Lookout Mountain because of Little River. It is home to many rare and endemic flora and fauna. Because of the growth that is projected to take place in our region over the next 35-40 years, there is not a better time than now to protect this Wild & Scenic worthy landscape. Public land managers of Desoto State Park and the Little River NPS along with other natural resource managers from Fish & Wildlife and US Forest Service would be charged with protecting the river’s scenic and recreational values, and new dams would be forever prohibited. Designation would not affect private property and would ensure that the experiences and economic benefits Little River provides today will be there for future generations. This effort requires enthusiastic local and regional support. We are in the process of identifying key river stakeholders and community partners. Over the next several months, we will begin reaching out to stakeholders asking businesses and individuals to endorse the nomination. We invite you to join the movement to protect Little River!

Southern Exposure Film Update!

Jebb Brachner has been in the area shooting some great footage of Little River for the 2019 Southern Exposure Film Fellowship. We had the good fortune to take him and his colleagues to some of our favorite places along the river, from the headwaters to the mouth. I believe it was a good experience for them. They enjoyed meeting so many great members of the community while in town. The film is currently being edited to reflect the phenomenon that is Little River. It will tell a story of why people flock here and why the folks that live here are the heart of Lookout Mountain. It will remind us just how important the river is to this community and how protecting it is vital for future generations.

The Little River Waterkeeper will host the Southern Exposure Film on Thursday, September 26, at the Little River Canyon Center. Mark your calendar! We will send out more details in the coming months.

Happy Birthday to Sharon Doherty

You are the most talented, beautiful, creative and hard working person I have ever known. On top of that you have been exceptionally giving to so many others - and certainly me.

Ahead of the curve at every stage... valedictorian, Alpha Kappa Mu, award winning news reporter and anchor, and respected attorney... along the journey... piano, clarinet, singing, painting, knitting, writing and traveled 45 countries. You have done it all, from the beginning on your own... independent and self-made.

You are a brilliant and extremely important example of how to live a fully balanced life for our son Jackson and Nathan. You are adored by Marnie, Judy and brother Stan... and every one within range of your Dad knows how proud he is.

You have my full respect, admiration and love... for all the days we’ve had - and the many more wonderful ones to come.

My greatest happiness in life is sharing every day with you.

Chris
most people. She had love in her voice,”

Grounded in music, Wilma’s friendship with Elizabeth developed about five years ago. “I called her several times a week, sometimes every day,” said Wilma. “I’d say, ‘I just want to find out about my best friend.’ She would laugh so loud. She liked for me to call her my best friend. I just truly loved her. As well as Dorothy. I really loved her, too.”

“Elizabeth had some very, very sad times, but she was also happy in her life,” Wilma continued. “She lost her only son, Bill, who died in 2012, and there were times that she really felt very sad.”

Amelia Kirk Loll, who visited with Elizabeth every day in her later years, said, “It just about killed her when her son died. She was a wonderful mother. We had so many good talks.” Amelia also grew up in Mentone, surrounded by the music of the mountain, and she has enjoyed attending the singings since the group formed. “I love all the harmonies of the voices,” she said.

“We enjoy singing together so much,” said Cathie Crow. “The week before she died, I told her, ‘Elizabeth, if this is too much for you, you just let us know.’ She said, ‘It’s never too much for me. No matter what, y’all keep singing.’ The next week, she was in her bed and couldn’t really respond, but she’d lift her hand and try to make the motions of participating. So, we went right ahead, because she told us to.”

“She played right up to the end,” recalled Mickey Luck. “She’d sit in her recliner chair and we’d put a keyboard in her lap so she could play. When she became confined to her bed, the musicians still gathered around. She’d holler out, ‘Boy that sounds good!’ or ‘You guys are good today. That was a good one!’”

“Elizabeth made this little group very, very close,” said Wilma Fletcher. “It developed in a way that we all care for each other very much.”

The Roman Singers continue to meet for about an hour very Thursday afternoon, starting promptly at 3 p.m. Bob and Cathie Crow are now hosting the singing in their comfortable home. The group invites anyone interested to join them. The Crow’s address is 43 County Road 621 in Mentone. If you’d more information, call Cathie at 256-634-4230.

“We’re a good group and we are a close group,” said Wilma Fletcher. “We just really care about each other. The old hymns have a lot of meaning to them, and we don’t want to give them up.”

Strummers at the Little River Canyon Center

by Betsy Dillbeck

Once a month during the summer, the lobby of the Little River Canyon Center resonates with the unique sound produced by a group of musicians playing dulcimers.

“The sound is reminiscent of what some might call “ole timey mountain music.” Well, that is exactly what it is, and what better place to present this music and the traditional instrument of this music, than on the top of DeKalb County’s Lookout Mountain.

The Appalachian dulcimer is a fretted string instrument of the zither family, typically with three or four strings, originally played in the Appalachian region of the United States, according to Wikipedia.

But for many in the group, called the “Cornwall Strummers,” it is a way to play their music as a group and to enjoy the company of other seniors who have taken quite an interest in playing the dulcimer.

Paul and Betty McWhorter founded this group of 19 musicians about three years ago. “We saw an article in the newspaper about lessons on the dulcimer given by a group called the RSVP (Retired Seniors Volunteer Program) in Guntersville,” said Paul. “Betty thought it would be fun. We got some other folks to go along and we took the six-week course. The dulcimer is pretty simple and it wasn’t difficult to pick up.”

Going along with Betty and Paul were their two aunts (sisters-in-law), Martha McWhorter and Louise Nelson, both in their late 80s. Everyone lived on Cornwall Drive in Cedar Bluff, so when they got together as a group to practice, they became the “Cornwall Strummers.”

Ms. McWhorter and Ms. Nelson had previous musical training and said, “It was easy and fun to learn a new instrument and we love the monthly group. It’s a way for us to keep active and we enjoy being with the other members.”

The McWhorters started as a group of six and now they number 19 members when all can get together. “It sort of evolved through just ‘word of mouth,’ a quilting group, and friends of friends,” said Betty. Besides gathering at the Canyon Center, they play at nursing homes in the area, churches, and have played at the Cherokee County Historical Museum and library.

“Our selections are primarily old hymns, gospel, and ‘fiddle’-type tunes, and other traditional folk tunes from the Appalachian area,” said Paul. “Most of the music is familiar to our players.”

Playing along with the “Strummers” is Linda Arthur, a flutist and resident of Lookout Mountain. “I was playing at a craft festival, and the group was also there. I wondered how my flute would sound with them, asked, and they invited me to join.”

Arthur mostly plays the Native American flute, which she has bought from Native American craftsmen in the Arizona area. “I first heard the flute played at the Grand Canyon and just loved the sound,” explained Arthur. “I came home and met someone who played and gave lessons. That was nine years ago, and I still play every chance I get. And, the acoustics in this lobby are amazing, letting the flute sound.”

Paul McWhorter’s instrument of choice is a hybrid of the banjo and dulcimer, called a “banjolo.”

The sound is reminiscent of what some might call “ole timey mountain music.” Well, that is exactly what it is, and what better place to present this music and the traditional instrument of this music, than on the top of DeKalb County’s Lookout Mountain.

The dulcimer Barbara McWhorter plays is made of box elder, with a beautiful pinkish grain to the wood.

sound just hover and blend with the dulcimers.” The ceiling in the Canyon Center lobby is about 30 feet high.

Listening to Arthur play with the dulcimers, her flute seems to give a peaceful, subtle sound with the dulcimers, who sometimes, have a more “tinny” sound. Paul McWhorter says that many have compared the dulcimer sound to bagpipes, reflecting back to the Scotch-Irish who settled the Appalachian region.

Accompanying the dulcimer this month were two friends of Arthur’s, music teachers Larry and Waana Sullins from Memphis, TN, playing the guitar and flute. “They’re professionals and really enjoyed the opportunity to play with the group,” said Arthur.

Larry and Waana Sullins, left and center, from Memphis, TN, and Lookout Mountain resident Linda Arthur, right, played along with the Strummers in July. Arthur regularly joins in their performances and practices.

“ar play the four- or three-stringed dulcimer,” said Paul. “It is not what they call a “chromatically sealed” instrument and only plays in the key of D. It is fretted and the frets are usually played with one’s fingers. It’s very basic and easily learned.”

Paul plays a “hybrid dulcimer,” a “banjo dulcimer,” or a “dulcijo.” It looks like a dulcimer but with a banjo-head on the body. “The sound is more ‘banjo-like’ than the plain dulcimer,” he says.

For more information on the group, email the McWhorters at bmcwhorter@tds.net. They will be playing again at the Canyon Center on Tuesday, August 6. Visitors are welcome to come and enjoy the music.

Mentone Wedding Chapel

Candle Lite Ceremonies • Music • Photographs • Flowers • Receptions • Lodging • Limousine

Nestled in the woods atop Lookout Mountain, near Mentone, Alabama, this quaint little chapel is surrounded by ferns, forest and flowers. The chapel is a scaled version of traditional Appalachian churches of days gone by. Stained glass windows filtering soft forest sunrays and soft organ music accent an ambiance fitting the wedding ceremony. Inside, wooden pews will seat approximately 60 guests.

Linda Patterson, owner of the chapel, said the idea for it began with a bell, and now that bell rings as newlyweds exit the door of the chapel.

Last fall, I was eating with a friend in a local restaurant, and during a pause in our conversation, I couldn’t help noticing the number of people with their heads bowed toward their phones. A table of four women caught my eye. Three of the women were deep into what was on their phone, while one looked wistfully out the window, no one to talk to. She seemed sad. Here she was with three other women who said they were friends, but what was on their phones seemed more important than conversation with her. This scene made an indelible mark on my heart.

One of the most basic needs we have as human beings is to connect with other human beings. We need each other. We can’t exist in a vacuum. Yet we are bombarded by billboards, commercials, and ads that tout the next brightest shiny object in the world of technology. Thus, our connections get thinner and thinner, leading to complete breakage and a feeling of isolation.

A phone can’t hold a child who is sad or sick. It can’t comfort an elder who is feeling abandoned.

Recently I was approached by a friend with an idea of a way to reach a broader base of people who are looking for someone to listen to them, to be acknowledged, to be heard. Not to be judged or fixed. The previous examples were some specific reasons this idea appealed to me.

We aren’t the only country that is suffering with the lack of connection because of technology. The Friendship Bench Project in Zimbabwe is a successful evidence-based intervention developed to bridge the mental health treatment gap. With only two psychiatrists in the country, their mission is to “enhance mental well-being and improve the quality of life through the use of problem-solving therapy delivered by trained lay health workers. They focus on people who are suffering from common mental disorders, such as anxiety and depression.”

“Friendship benches are a safe place for people struggling with anxiety and depression to find help,” says Sheba Khumalo, lay health worker. “We are not conventional; our therapy rooms are outdoors under trees and our therapists are elderly Zimbabwean women. These women are city lay health workers who have become known as “community grandmothers.””

(For more information on this project, see friendshipbenchzimbabwe.org.)

This model has been used around the world with great success. In cities like Chicago and New York, groups have gotten together to provide “listeners” for whoever would sit down in a chair across from them in a public, yet not obvious, place. In general, the chairs are always filled, and the conversations actually often end with a hug, due to the mutual connection made during the conversations. With the deepening dependence we are seeing regarding technology, having a human being in front of us, actively listening to us, is a novel and much-needed experience.

On school playgrounds around this country, there is a movement to add “Buddy Benches” to each one. This bench idea was created by a 6th grade boy who felt there was a need in his school. He didn’t like that some kids had friends and were included, and others not. It is a bench where a child who wants to play or needs a friend will sit. They are often children who don’t have friends and may not be chosen for team sports. Other children are encouraged by their teachers to go to the bench and talk with the other child. Soon they are off joining in games and creating connections that are needed for healthy friendships.

In Mentone, these Friendship Benches could be used well. They wouldn’t be a substitute for good mental health therapy. But who doesn’t have a situation that they need to talk about with a neutral person? A “listener” doesn’t need to be a grandmother or therapist to sit and listen, although that is the model in Zimbabwe. It can be anyone who is able to listen without judgment or criticism, and who will keep the conversation confidential. It can be a bridge to health and well-being that doesn’t cost a co-pay or a long trip to Chattanooga, Huntsville, or Birmingham.

If you are interested in this project and want to get involved, either financially to buy the benches, or be one of the listeners, contact me at lifeasaonesie@gmail.com. My friend who first approached me about this is willing to donate one of the benches. Hopefully, one day soon we will have an “unveiling” of the first friendship bench in Mentone.

In Memoriam

Virginia Hammond Welch

December 3, 1932 – June 12, 2019

Virginia Welch passed away in June in Menlo. She had been a city council member since 1995. She was on the council because she really cared about the welfare and progress of her community. Though she was in her mid-80s, she remained busy and active until just a few months ago. Just last summer, she was still taking care of all of the city planters and flowers. She was a remarkable lady in many ways. She was born in Chattooga County and married J.D. Welch. They had two children, Donna and Mike. They moved to Fresno, California, for a number of years, but J.D. and Virginia came back to Menlo upon retirement and spent the remainder of their lives here.

Celebrate National Model Aviation Day on Saturday, August 17. Join in the fun, flying, food and Fellowship for all ages. Any aircraft are welcome.

A raffle will support this organization with donations from local restaurants.

The gate opens at 9 a.m. at Jacoway Field, 23rd St. SE in Fort Payne. For more information, visit dekalbrcflyers.com.

Book Review by Anne McLeod

Set List by Ray Atkins, Mercer University Press, 2018

Ray Atkins’s novel, Set List, will pick you up and spin you back and forth between the 1970s bar band scene and the present day where the band’s leader encounters his own mortality. Blanchard Shankles, native of Sequoyah, Georgia, has faced challenges before—a feckless, alcoholic father and a mentally unstable mother prone to behaviors embarrassing on her better days and horrific on her worst. But when a cardiac event lands him in an east Tennessee hospital, Blanchard’s dreams of an appointment with death propel him back home to come to terms with even older heartaches.

Every chapter of Set List is named for a 1970s hit song: “I Don’t Need No Doctor” by Humble Pie; “Dream On” by Aerosmith; “Third Rate Romance” by The Amazing Rhythm Aces, and so on. This is the set list of Blanchard’s life as well as for his band, most recently and aptly renamed Murphy’s Law. Murphy’s Law, for those who have not heard of it or have forgotten what it means, is the old adage that “Anything that can go wrong will go wrong,” and for Blanchard that seems to be the case more often than not. Blanchard, while fatalistic, is still a fighter, determined to live—or die—on his own terms.

The closing of every chapter is a song composed by Blanchard and his best friend and bass player John Covey, who faithfully backs him up on stage and off. These read so much like songs that ought to have been recorded in the 1970s, that the reader will almost believe that he or she has heard them on the radio.

References to places like Little River Canyon and Fort Payne are no coincidence. Ray Atkins is a graduate of Valley Head High School and an English instructor at Georgia Northwestern Technical College; he currently lives in Rome, Georgia. When he spoke in May at Moon Lake Community Library, he explained that Sequoyah is a dead ringer for Summerville in Chattooga County, Georgia. Set List and Atkins’s other five published books are steeped in local geography so that readers familiar with our hills and mountains will recognize them, even when names are sometimes changed. Rediscover them through the eyes of unforgettable character Blanchard Shankles in Set List.

Set List by Raymond Atkins is available for check out from Moon Lake Community Library.

Anne McLeod is the school librarian at Moon Lake Elementary School and a director of Moon Lake Community Library.

uring a recent visit to the home of Jim and Sharon Jones Harris, I was impressed by a large framed display of crewel embroidery hanging on the wall. Sharon explained that when she was so busy raising young children, days ran into each other and she missed having a sense of immediate accomplishment, so she took up embroidery.

“I tried to learn how to knit when I was pregnant with my son, Tom,” she said. “I learned to go one way, but didn’t know how to go back the other way. I didn’t have anybody to teach me.”

“So I began to practice various embroidery stitches. When the family settled down at night, often in front of the television, I enjoyed working on my embroidery. I appreciated having something to do where I could feel that certain sense of accomplishment I’d been missing.”

“I probably worked on the flower sampler 40 or 45 years ago. I did several pieces back then.”

This particular piece, which illustrates native wildflowers, one for each letter from A to Z, was stitched with wool thread on a linen backing.

Sharon and Jim returned to her native hometown of Mentone after retiring from respective careers in nursing and insurance in the Florence area of northwest Alabama. Sharon had the piece reframed and it now graces the walls of the beautiful home they built above Little River. —Kelly Leavitt
