DeKalb Team Attends Appalachian Gateway Communities Workshop

By Ray Padgett

Representatives develop action plan to improve economic competitiveness by capitalizing on the area's natural and cultural assets

A team from DeKalb County participated in a three-day workshop designed especially for towns and communities bordering national or state parks, forests and other treasured public lands. Working with national and regional experts on sustainable tourism, economic development, the arts, natural and cultural resources, transportation and branding, the 10-person team crafted a new vision that focuses on the unique Appalachian assets that make this region of Lookout Mountain an appealing place to live, work and recreate.

The partnership of the Appalachian Regional Commission, the National Endowment for the Arts, The Conservation Fund, and The National Trust for Historic Preservation convened the program. With partnership and relationship-building as essential elements to the Appalachian Gateway Communities Regional Workshop, each of the eight participating communities – ranging from Alabama to Virginia – formed a diverse team that included a public land manager, elected officials, business and tourism representatives, civic leaders, and community arts representatives.

Representatives on the DeKalb team were Gail Bishop, Larry Chesser, John Dersham, Carol Beddingfield, Bonnie and Jimmy Durham, Collins Kirby, Tami Reist, Billy Shugart, Rob Hammond, and Ray Padgett. The team worked to establish projects and plans that not only increase tourism in our communities and area of Lookout Mountain, but also improve the quality of life of our citizens.

The team will continue to work on identified projects and add other members of local government and state land management to the team. Identified projects will result in new and more cohesive efforts and better coordination of existing plans. As projects are implemented, this area will see increases in number of tourist visits, money spent and visit time, which will result in an increase in business and business opportunities and funding for local governments.

“The Mentone, Fort Payne, and public land (national and state) partnership was an ideal candidate for the Appalachian Gateway Communities Initiative because of the terrific natural and cultural resources and the emphasis of the arts in its community’s plans,” said Vice President of Sustainable Programs and Director of The Conservation Fund’s Conservation Leadership Network, Kris Hoellen. “It’s our goal to help communities foster valuable partnerships, reinforce development plans that balance environmental and economic goals and provide technical assistance to enable places like Fort Payne and Mentone to become even more vibrant and thriving communities.”

Remember When...

By Angie Carden

A friend of mine told me something her father said once, “How can the days be so long but the years go by so fast?” To me, that is a profound question. When I was given a stack of long passed copies of The Groundhog and asked to write this new segment, that was the first question that came to mind as I read through them all. We all know how time flies, but most of us are so busy with everyday life, that when we finally slow down and look up, we realize that years have passed.

If you happened to be reading The Groundhog in February of 1984, thirty years ago, you would remember the headline reading, (cont’d on page 20)
Mentone Matters
By Mayor Rob Hammond

The Appalachian Gateway Communities Regional Workshop in Abingdon, Virginia was an energizing and worthwhile experience for Team DeKalb and the other teams from Kentucky, North Carolina, and Virginia. We learned we must build on our existing natural, historical, and cultural assets for future economic development without sacrificing the essential character of our town and area. Gateway communities must balance nature and commerce. One of our speakers, Ted Eubanks, emphasized the importance of ecotourism and heritage tourism which are low volume, low impact, and high yield (people spend money!). He pointed out high volumes are inherently high impact and could adversely affect natural assets and quality of life.

Each team had the task of taking an inventory of the assets in their area and creating gateway action plan. Team DeKalb will continue to meet to further develop our plan. Even though I was not able to stay for the entire workshop, I really enjoyed being with the DeKalb team members and learning from professionals who are outstanding in their fields.

From The Editor

February 17, Groundhog Day, 1982: A small group of local citizens gather informally to discuss the possibilities of creating a local publication as an outreach to Mentone residents and visitors.

From that humble beginning, The Groundhog was born. There were no computers on which to compose the content or design the layout. Every month, MAPA members would meet to edit, cut and paste the layout. Today, The Groundhog has gone high-tech. Most communication is by e-mail, including stories from monthly contributors, artwork for advertisements, and final draft submission to the printer. Layout is accomplished through the use of state-of-the-art publishing software. Here's where technology ends and blood, sweat and tears begin: the papers are picked up from the printer by volunteers, who then distribute stacks of papers throughout DeKalb County and its outskirts. In addition, approximately 200 copies are manually labeled and mailed to subscribers.

Despite these changes, The Groundhog has managed to stay true to the mission of its founders: to inform residents of significant events concerning the Mentone area, and to educate its thousands of visitors of the historical background of this very special and unique community.

The Groundhog has always been a labor of love, and it continues to be for those who are involved in its monthly production, publication and distribution. Without the efforts of many volunteers, it would cease to exist. Local residents rely on it as their chief source of current events, and visitors know it's their best source for consolidated information about where to stay and what to do while they're in town. The most popular aspect of The Groundhog, though, has always been and continues to be the small-town personal feel of the paper. With its monthly recipe columns, birthday lists, and regular contributors such as Kristen Emory, a/k/a “The Chicken Lady,” The Groundhog creates a sense of community that would otherwise be missing from Mentone.

The Groundhog continues to break new ground in its efforts to educate and inform. We’ve launched into social media through Facebook, and there are ongoing discussions about creating an even stronger online presence.

This Groundhog Day marks the 32nd anniversary of the birth of this newspaper. We are honored to have the privilege of helping to see that The Groundhog continues to exist and even thrive. We’d like to thank the original Groundhog staff would be pleased with our efforts.

I remember my first impression of Mentone, which still is true...Mentone is a beautiful community, with so much natural beauty, and the warmth of the people living and working here, it is a wonderful place to live or visit. With so much to be thankful for, Mentone deserves to be enjoyed and shared. One way to enjoy and share such warmth and beauty is through the arts. The Mentone Area Arts Council (MAAC) works hard to provide the arts for everyone.

We promote big dreams in a small town atmosphere, bringing the arts and community together as one.

The Mentone Area Arts Council met January 22nd to finalize plans for 2014. Board Members for 2014 are Cynthia Stinson-President, Hank Willett-Vice President, Tammy Beane-Treasurer and Beverly Bates-Secretary; other Board members include, Elaine Gauldin, Brad Lackey, Harriet O’Rear, Harry Ohme, Scott Thomas, Don and Rhea Pirch and Thomas Qualls.

Currently, a survey is available on the MAAC website, www.mentonearts.com which will provide valuable input for classes and seminars, along with other areas of interest. The response has been very positive and we welcome anyone to log on and complete the survey.

MAAC will sponsor various activities and events this year including an Art Auction in May, Julyfest, and the Home Tour in October. Other events being planned are spring flower planting and community beautification, summer music programs, supporting the arts at Moon Lake School, along with classes and seminars throughout the year. All of these dates and further event information will be posted on our website, along with other information and how everyone can become involved through MAAC to help make our community a great place to live and visit.

We are currently receiving new members; anyone wishing to support the arts can become a MAAC member by visiting www.mentonearts.org.

Want to know more about Mentone’s early years?

MAPA is offering Zora Strayhorn’s popular book Mentone, Alabama: A History, a fascinating collection of information about many of Mentone’s oldest structures, the early settlers and popular legends and lore. Also included are several historic photographs of the Mentone area. You can buy Mentone, Alabama: A History at the following businesses in Mentone:

- Wildflower Cafe
- Kamama Gallery
- Crow’s Nest Antiques

The cost is only $15.00, and all sales proceeds go to the Mentone Area Preservation Association to further its goals for 2013. Help support MAPA and get answers to all your questions about the history of Mentone!

Live outside the area? Send a check in the amount of $18 (covering shipping and handling) to MAPA, P.O. Box 50, Mentone, AL 35984, and a book will be sent to you. Be sure to include your shipping address.

Sometimes the best thing to do is discuss and discuss some more. This seems to describe the meeting of the Board of Directors of Moon Lake Community Library on January 16, 2014. This was the Annual Meeting, the meeting set aside for each director to submit a report of what we did last year. Of course, this leads to what do we need to do now, this summer and from now on. We need plans to get you to use the library. As always happens when you put events on paper, you have done much more than you ever thought. This was the case here but we want next year to be so much better. We talked about and agreed that our big successes were book sales, calendars, bridge benefit and others too numerous to list.

This led to 2014 and what we can do to make the library more enjoyable for you. This led to the organization of committees. (As everyone knows, a giraffe is a horse put together by a committee.) Our committees were the exception to the rule. For instance, Committee on Acquisitions will concentrate on finding the Book of the Month to keep us up-to-date with our reading. The Committee on Volunteers will continue to have current calendars for volunteer help in the library and will look for new persons to train to work. The Committee on Special Programs will continue book sales, Holiday Open House, Meet the Author and other events. The Committee on Ways and Means will review the profit made from each last year project and suggest some new ones for next year. The formation of a long term planning team was suggested. A list of suggestions was submitted. This included groups meeting more often during library open hours, having current newspapers and magazines available, setting up a comfortable place with cushiony chairs and a table, and developing a Facebook page to keep you abreast of the happenings in the library.

We would like to make a concerted effort to enrich the learning of Moon Lake students by offering exhibits or fun activities to make learning more meaningful or to reinforce what they’ve learned. We would like to maybe help with science projects, art exhibits and other events during after school hours.

This discussion led us to agree to discuss these ideas and others at our next meeting: Thursday, February 20, 2014 at 3 pm in the Moon Lake Community Library.

FREE, LOCAL ASSISTANCE IN ACCESSING THE AFFORDABLE CARE MARKETPLACE IS JUST A PHONE CALL OR EMAIL AWAY.

If you or someone you know needs health care insurance information but you are not sure how to access the Affordable Care Marketplace, we invite you to either call 256-674-3145 or email pwnanavigators@gmail.com for assistance. Two Mentone-area ladies who are volunteer navigators will be glad to assist you in the process of signing up for coverage or to answer any questions you may have about the program. They will respond to your call or email if you will leave your contact information.

It is not too late to sign up for health insurance through the national health care insurance exchange - also known as “Obamacare.” OPEN ENROLLMENT ENDS MARCH 31, 2014. After this date, anyone who does not have paid health care insurance will be subject to a penalty for not complying with the Affordable Care Act which is now a federal law. All health insurance policies must now meet a certain threshold of services offered which is good for consumers because it means more protections are built into the system for consumers.

PLEASE FEEL FREE TO CALL 256-674-3145 or TO EMAIL PWNANAVIGATORS@GMAIL.COM for assistance.
Rhododendron Garden Club

The weather had warmed considerably by Tuesday, January 14, 2014, and everyone was ready for some sunning and funning. The room at the M.E.R.F. Community House was abuzz with laughter and talk. We needed to know how everyone did when the temperature dipped to 0 degrees and below! You could still feel the chill in the old house but the heat was on and it was warming up fast. The meeting was called to order by the president, Peggy Roark, by asking all to participate in the pledge of allegiance to the flag of United States. Martha Wood tickled our funny bone with a list of “plantings” all gardens need. She gave each member a copy of a Wildflower Rebus. The first puzzle was a picture of a girl with a black ring around her eye, of course, everyone knew that this was Black-eyed Susan but we had one that we never answered (the answers were not available.) Refreshments were served by Peggy Roark and Dianne Kuehl.

Martha Wood presented a program on “Wildflowers of Alabama.” Wildflowers are defined as “herbaceous flowering plants which occur naturally.” Wildflowers can be found in all shapes and sizes, from the large Joe Pie Weed to the tiny ground cover. Wildflowers can be “native” or “introduced” species. Many of the wildflowers we commonly see and assume to be native are species that were introduced hundreds of years ago and which have become naturalized. Naturalized means that the species have been able to grow and reproduce successfully in their adopted home without benefit of cultivation.

Wildflowers are an important part of the environment. Not only do they provide beauty but they also add important sources of food for many animals including butterflies, bees, wasps, and other insects, songbirds, wild turkey, quail, and mammals such as raccoons, mice, foxes, and deer. Wildflowers are often taken for granted. There are many reasons why wildflowers disappear from an area. Sometimes species disappear because the environmental conditions required changes, young forests become older, fires change soil and light conditions, or a flood temporarily alters an area.

There are a number of things that you can do to help protect wildflowers. You can establish wildflowers in your yard. If you own an area that has wildflowers in it, consider making protection and enhancement one of your management objectives. When possible, use wildflower seeds and plants which were developed for the area you plan to use them. Wildflowers are very enjoyable plants, but their use in residential and commercial landscapes is often overlooked. Native plants not only protect and maintain the native environment, but also add beauty and diversity to the landscape.

The business meeting reconvened and several items were addressed. The meeting adjourned with everyone who wanted one, getting a house plant.

My paternal grandmother was from Wilmington, North Carolina, and met my grandfather sometime in the early 1890’s. My great-grandfather had moved to Wilmington from New Jersey shortly after the end of the Civil War. His welcome there as an immigrant and a damn Yankee was not the greatest, and he had a tough time being accepted into the community. Apparently, it all worked out OK, since my grandfather met, wooed, and married a lovely young lady in the Dock family. The fact that the Docks were from Germany also and newly immigrated to this country may well have helped in the assimilation of my Schwarz family into the Wilmington community. The Dock family had four daughters, the youngest of whom was Carrie Teresa Ulrich Dock. Her three sisters were Elizabeth Wilhelmina, Anna Dorothea, and Matilda Wilhelmina. My grandfather Julius and Carrie married on Oct. 24, 1894; he was 23 years old and she was 21. At some point they moved to Savannah and set up housekeeping.

In 1932 during the great mistake called “prohibition,” Savannah and apparently all of Georgia in essence told the federal government where they could put the law. So, I have been told, there were speakeasies, bars, and taverns all over town. Nothing was going to keep the Savannahans from their supply of liquor. I know I heard my father tell of meeting the rum runners on the beach at Tybee Island and of rowing out to a runner anchored in the Savannah River outside of the harbor.

One of grandmother’s sisters, Matilda Wilhelmina, known to me as Aunt Minnie, came to visit several times a year. As was usual in those days, Aunt Minnie rode the train to Savannah. She always packed a large suitcase for the trip and when she got ready to leave for home in Wilmington, she packed her clothes in a box and mailed them home. The nice suitcase was used to transport liquor home to the family. She had made this run enough times that it was a comfortable routine and she had never encountered any problems. Her trip was an overnight jaunt and she had a Pullman berth. On one occasion she had settled into her berth and was preparing to sleep. The train crossed the Savannah River into South Carolina and pulled off onto a siding and stopped. She thought nothing of it until a rather loud group entered the rail car she was in. From the bits of conversation she could understand, it became apparent that the Feds had stopped the train, boarded it, and were looking for liquor, compartment by compartment, berth by berth. The closer the pack got, the wilder Aunt Minnie's imagination built and the more panic stricken she became. Finally she could just see herself spending the rest of her days in prison – her destiny. The group arrived at her compartment and she waited to hear her name called, for the curtain to open, and for the Feds to find her suitcase full of liquor. She knew her days of freedom were numbered.

What she did hear, however, was the conductor saying that they didn’t need to look in this compartment; there’s a very sweet gray-haired lady in there who wouldn’t do anything against the law. Just don’t bother her and let her sleep. Whether Aunt Minnie continued to transport liquor across state lines I have never heard, but I do suspect that she did.
February is the month of “Love”. Flowers, chocolates, mushy cards, fancy outfits and expensive restaurants! We have all been there, and the sentiment is lovely. But as I sit here writing, I can hear my daughter and her friends yelling and giggling on the other side of the house and it makes me remember that Love comes in thousands of shapes, sizes and depths. Which made me think, although Valentine’s Day is one special day of the year, we should all take care not to miss life’s everyday special moments to show those nearest and dearest to us exactly how much they mean to us! We should put forth a little effort daily throughout the year to make our loved ones feel cherished and appreciated!

Wishing you all a very love-filled Valentine’s Day as well as a year full of love-filled days!

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees F.
Slice four vine-ripened tomatoes from core to core. Remove and discard the seeds and juice, and add the tomatoes to a casserole dish. Drizzle with a little olive oil, and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Combine the 2 tbsp olive oil, ¾ c panko bread crumbs, ½ c grated parmesan, 1 tbsp parsley, 1 clove garlic (finely chopped), 1 shallot (finely chopped), pinch of red pepper flakes and some salt and pepper together in a small bowl. Fill the tomatoes with the panko mixture. Bake 20 minutes. Drizzle with a splash of olive oil before serving.

Gray DeGraffenried Morrison, II, 1925-2014

My father, Gray Morrison, loved Lookout Mountain Camp for Boys (he was a Director), Mentone and Lookout Mountain. His grandfather, Dr. Jacob Allen Gorman, founded the camp and opened it in 1928. Dr. Gorman built the house in Mentone known as “Hanging Rock Cottage” (listed on The National Historic Register). This is the home you see hanging over the bluff on the left as you first exit Mentone and drop down the mountain to Valley Head.

Dad knew every trail, rock and road on top of Lookout, and I relished in his stories, especially the older ones…like square dancing on top of what used to be “The Hitching Post” with who would become his bride…or stories about his adventures while on horseback and the trails he would find or just getting an ice cream cone with Black Walnut ice cream at the Hummingbird. He would talk about the old days of sitting quietly on the porch of Hanging Rock Cottage and, if conditions were right, he said at night when it was very still and calm, you could actually hear conversations all the way from the train station in Valley Head. The stories I heard about Shine McNue… and the stories I heard FROM Shine McNue… were classics and always positive. He said his time spent on the mountain was his favorite.

Dad had a great many friends in Mentone. He touched many lives and will be missed. His obituary follows:

Walking through the door of Ballard Hardware in Menlo, Georgia, is taking a step back in time; you are immediately caught up in the nostalgia of a time gone by. When I first moved to Lookout Mountain a little over a year ago, one of the locals said I had to visit Ballard’s.

Each time I visit it reminds me when I was a kid growing up in the 1950’s, making regular visits to the local hardware store with my dad. I was always in awe of the hardware store; I am still in awe today.

The store was opened in 1917 by Mr. Rex Wyatt who owned and operated the store until his death in 1951, at which time his son Charlie Wyatt took the store over and continued to operate the store until 1954. One day Charlie Wyatt walked next door to the drug store owned by Mr. Gene Ballard and asked him if he'd like to buy the hardware store. Mr. Ballard asked when he would like to sell it, to which Mr. Wyatt replied, “today.” It has been in the Ballard family since. Mr. Gene operated the store until his age and health required him to retire. Gene's son Don, who retired from the U.S. Navy after twenty-nine years of service, took over operations of Ballard's in 1995.

Don claims to be the top salesman and store manager, not difficult especially since he is the only employee. Don also is responsible for janitorial duties, but one can sense upon entry there is little attention given to “clean up.” It would be safe to say some of the original dust is present from the store’s beginning. You will also find things in this hardware store not seen in many years, perhaps never before.

As you enter, you immediately notice this is a special place and everything has a story; there's the metal ceiling panels 2x4 feet, along with intricate metal crown molding. Don tells the story how two ladies visited one day and one of them was caught up in counting the ceiling tiles; after a while she asked if she could use the calculator and after some figuring she told Don she’d like to buy his ceiling (for a fairly tidy sum). Don replied it would make too much mess, dust and so on...she said she’d have all that taken care of too. After a minute Don declined the offer, saying it would take away from the character of the place. Don often has offers to buy something unique in the store. He’s had offers from buyers from a notable restaurant chain, as well as individuals, but he doesn’t want to begin selling off these special items and change the look and feel of the store.

Lining the walls and on top of the many shelves are things like a front grill from a 1939 Chevy and original RR lanterns from the old Menlo train depot which was removed in the 1960’s. There are also metal rings which used to go around the old wooden wagon wheels. Then there's the WWI Swiss Army rifle hanging right below the lead box which used to hold the lead that was cut to make the glass on the windows. (cont’d on page 17)
My boards may be a little creaky and my paint a little flaky but I am full of life. This winter and spring have brought the young and the wise through my doors so my walls are full of joy, laughter and learning.

Brrrr, this winter has frozen my brain and given me a few senior moments. Though he would like to, Pat Robertson has not been helping us with senior lunches this fall but Pat Peterson has. She was also a great elf at the Christmas party and hopefully will be back to join us on February 19th when senior lunches begin again after a long winter nap. Linda Lawton is another elf that helped us celebrate in December that was not mentioned in the January article. Hopefully, my brain will defrost soon.

The Moon Lake Elementary School students were busy in December discovering how the penguins could save Christmas and making homemade ornaments for their entry into the Tree of Festivals hosted by the Landmarks of DeKalb County in Fort Payne. Hope you had a chance to go see the festival of trees at the Opera house. Moon Lake was awarded $250 for having the Most Artistically Beautiful tree. The theme was Christmas memories through ornaments. The judges loved that the tree was truly decorated by the children. A grandfather made the wooden ornaments for the students to paint and they created wonderful paper chains too. Don’t you remember great handmade ornaments you’ve made? The gifts under the tree were cans of food to help with St. Joseph’s food pantry collection. Congratulations to Ms. Paula and her artists at Moon Lake. Just imagine what works of art will be produced for MERF’s fundraiser in April!

Thank you to the Rhododendron Garden club for planting more daffodils on my grounds - I cannot wait for them to brighten our beautiful Mentone. Come join me at the walking track and watch the beauties emerge.

MERF continues to be thankful for all the ways the Mentone community supports the fun and the learning that happens here. MERF friends--know that you are loved and appreciated.

Happy Valentine's Day
Got cabin fever yet? For those of us who work outside, it has been a cold winter thus far. Will February bring even more cold and snow?

Did you know that the cold weather and snow are beneficial for our plants? The very cold temps kill some of the bugs that can harm our plants. We need three weeks of cold temperatures for the bugs to die and if the pattern keeps up, we will have fewer to deal with this coming spring and summer. The snow has nitrogen in it which provides nutrients to the soil. You may see some ‘greening’ of the grass after a snowfall. I can see some in my yard as I look out the office window. Snow also acts as a blanket to protect the roots from very cold temperatures. So, there are good things about the cold and snow. I try to think about that when I am tired of being indoors and itching to get into the garden. Spring will come soon enough so I will just enjoy my time indoors and try to finish some of the projects that have been on my to-do list.

Even with all the sleet, rain, snow, and cold weather, we do have some pretty days when the temp rises above 50 degrees and the sun shines bright. It is on those days when we can get outside and do a little in the yard. I still have weeds to clear out from last summer and fall. Since they are not growing right now, if I can get them cleared away, the garden will have a great start for the new growing season. I can also incorporate some fresh compost and let it sit for a few weeks to feed the soil. A new layer of mulch or pine straw will help to keep the roots warm and growing and prevent many early weeds. A granular weed preventer can be applied now to keep the seeds from germinating. The early annual weeds, Henbit and chickweed, germinate in the fall, and may be presenting their tiny flowers in some beds now. As an afterthought, it is good to put out a pre-emergent at the right time, preferably in late fall.

For the vegetable garden, bring in some fresh compost and organic matter and till into the beds. Come April, a light re-tilling of the bed will make it ready for planting. Remember. Most warm season veggies should not be planted until after the last danger of frost, which is usually around April 15 in our part of the state. Of course, cool season veggies can be planted earlier.

If you really want to plant ornamentals such as shrubs and perennials, as long as the ground is not frozen, you can do so. Most trees can be planted now, too. I would wait on the magnolias, though. They prefer warmer spring weather. The plants’ roots have time to get started well before they have to work on buds and blooms. Come spring, the new beds will burst forth with lustrous green and beautiful blooms. Some perennials, such as the Lenten Rose, will begin blooming soon, so putting them in now will generate a pretty garden almost immediately.

I am sure your garden catalogs have started arriving in the mail. The seed and plant companies are very smart; they send their picture catalogs for you to review while you have to be indoors. If, like me, you read them and begin making your list of what you want, you get excited about spring and just have to get some new items. Visit or call your local garden center to place your orders now. Most garden center owners are glad to bring in what you want, and now is the time for them to place their orders.

So, sit back, enjoy the beauty of winter, and dream of your beautiful landscape this spring and summer.

Mountain Herbalist: Hardwood Therapy
By L. C. Moon

Winter is a peaceful time in the woods on Lookout Mountain. Day or night, you can walk through a forest lined with sleeping trees and filled with the music of the river, creeks and waterfalls. As you walk through the forest, you can hear the whistle of the wind through the branches and the wildlife stirring beneath the trees. The sounds are much louder in winter than in the other seasons. I welcome the voice of winter to break the sometimes eerie silence deep in the woods day and night.

The sounds echo in the bare forest; such as, during the day, the deer tromping down trails, the songs of the birds and/or the turkeys rustling the leaves in search of food, are much more pronounced. The silent winter nights give way to howling winds, creaking trees, possums and coons scavenging, coyotes hunting and the haunting screeches of the owls.

The more I learn about the forest, the more my relationship to nature deepens. Winter provides a wonderful time to identify the trees by observing their bark, buds, limbs, leaf scars and growth patterns. Since learning the characteristics of the trees, they have become like acquaintances or close friends that I recognize for their true identity.

The stately oaks (Quercus) are a place for animals to make their homes and provide great materials for baskets and furniture. Dry oak wood provides warm fires with plenty of coals as well as blesses us with food and many folk remedies. The beauty of white and red oaks blesses us, even though red oaks are quite stinky. If you have ever had red oak in your home for firewood, then you know what I mean.

Oak is very astringent and two teaspoons of dried white oak bark simmered in about a pint of water is known to be great for diarrhea when used as a tea. The tannin content is what makes the oak so astringent. As a result of the tannin content, if you plan to use the acorns as a food source you will want to boil them in several changes of water or soak them in moving water, cradled in a strainer, for a few days before consuming them or grinding them into meal for baking.

Oak is known to be a mild anti-tumor remedy and mildly antiviral. Author Alma Hutchens writes that oak decreases mucous in the stomach to help cure post nasal drip, allow for better food absorption and in turn possibly raise metabolism. External applications of a tea made with oak leaves or bark has proven to be beneficial when used as a wash for skin rashes and inflammations. Tommie Bass (old time folk herbalist) recommended a tea of white oak bark applied externally for decreasing age spots, but offered no guarantees. In Trying to Give Ease, written by Crellin and Philpott at Duke University about Mr. Bass, says that white oak is an ‘alternative’ which is a term that is very vague. Simply put ‘alternative’ means it cleanses impurities and alters the body from an out of balance state to a more healthy state of being with no real physiological explanation.

In Mountain Medicine by Darryl Patton, you can find detailed folk stories about how Tommie Bass used oak as medicine. Usually white oak is used internally more so than red oak; however, Tommie Bass recommended red oak bark tea to be used internally for cirrhosis of the liver, a bleeding bladder and thrust.

Hickory (Carya), another common Lookout Mountain hardwood, has limbs that have been used as a switch for naughty children or to heal earaches of many in years past. I hear many stories about grandparents going out and cutting a green hickory limb and holding it over the fire until the sap comes out to drip in the ear of the ailing patient.

The medicinal purposes of hickory are not commonly employed any more. It was most commonly used as a wash for ulcers and sores or to purify the system. Jethro Kloss author of Back to Eden recommends mixing one teaspoon of the granulated bark or leaves with one cup of boiling water and simmer for thirty minutes to make a decoction for purifying the system.

Hickory was very valuable for more than medicine to the pioneers. When hickory bark is combined with alum it makes a greenish dye. It was a favorite for many when using potash for the alkali in the soap making process. The nuts of hickory have also been broken and boiled for the soap making process.

Hickory was used for tools, large screws, furniture, flails for thrashing grain and more. You can receive a sweet treat from the hickories if you tap them and harvest the sap as you would a maple tree. As well, the Hickory nut has a pleasant taste and can be eaten straight from the shell.

Most herbalists have their favorite remedies and Wild Black Cherry (Prunus Serotina) is a strainer, for a few days before consuming them or

Mentone Wedding Chapel
Nestled in the woods atop Lookout Mountain, near Mentone, Alabama, this quaint little chapel is surrounded by ferns, forest and flowers. The chapel is a scaled version of traditional Appalachian churches of days gone by. Stained glass windows filtering soft forest sunrays and soft organ music accent an ambiance fitting the wedding ceremony. Inside, wooden pews will seat approximately 60 guests.

Linda Patterson, owner of the chapel, said the idea for it began with a bell, and now that bell rings as newlyweds exit the door of the chapel.

dynamite blasting caps. The store used to sell dynamite as well (until the government stopped allowing it). There is a concrete building out back next to the coal pile which was where the dynamite was kept.

Speaking of coal, there is the old cast iron pot belly stove sitting in the middle of the store which was the source of heat. Although it has been patched many times, it still works, and Don keeps it stoked with the large coal rocks from out back.

In the front window is a three-row, walk behind planter in excellent condition from 1936, with the original tags still on. Another interesting item which I’ve never seen before is the ‘nuts and bolts’ stand. It looks a bit like an old library card holding box. It stands about six foot high and pivots around its large base; of course, it’s being used and is full of nuts and bolts and sundry items and works just fine. There is a brass plate on the top which indicates it was manufactured in 1901. It may sag a bit, but at more than 100 years old I’d say it’s doing fine.

Of course this is a working hardware store with locals coming in and buying needed items without having to drive 20-30 miles away. Don says most of his sales are the usual items, plumbing and electrical supplies, etc. but he did have a lady come in once needing a special item—mortise locks. He just happened to have six of them, and she bought them all saying she couldn't find them anywhere else in the area.

Then there is one more thing I’ve never seen, nor heard of, and one Don cannot find any information about. It is a converter for a shotgun from a 12 gauge to a 410 gauge. It is basically a pipe with threading in its original box, and the price marked is $7.95.

One more thing, even if you don’t need any hardware items, Don welcomes visitors to stop by, visit and browse through the store. Take a seat around the old stove and let Don take you on a trip through history. It will be time well spent. Oh, he probably wouldn’t mind if you were to purchase something as well, just to help keep the store open. We hope Ballard’s continues to be open for many more years to come.

Ballard’s is located on main Street in Menlo and you can find Don there Monday through Friday and half-day on Saturday.

“Granny Dollar: The Legend That Lives”. Inside, you would have read news about the “Alternatives in Mentone Water Crisis; given in statement by Mayor Rob Hammond” (Yes, Rob Hammond was Mayor thirty years ago as well as now!) And speaking of Mayor Hammond, you would have also seen the birth announcement for his eldest son Jordan, born a few months earlier.
And the major story that was receiving national coverage was titled “Cloudmont Ski Resort Breaks Records; Attains Amazing Media Recognition”. Having lived here my entire life, some of these stories still fill me with pride to live in such a beautiful, quaint, close-knit and super friendly town. I hope you enjoy looking back on Mentone News and we can all continue to Remember When...

Flying Over Mentone

By Tom Bazemore

Peace of mind and heart has to be one of the most precious things in life. Many spend years wandering the four corners in search of it. Some never find it. A good number of folks from all walks of life have found it in the Mentone area. They, along with lifetime residents, make it a genuinely nice place to visit or live. For me, Mentone has a peace and spiritual ambiance. Most of us have been places we would rather not go back to, but Mentone is a place we enjoy going back to time and again.

In general, the changing seasons on Lookout Mountain are a feast for the eyes but particularly so in the Mentone area. There is something about every season to enjoy. One really appreciates it even more after being caught in a traffic jam in a big city. The air is fresher and cleaner, too.

If you will, just a minute or two on a related subject. Many of us find flying peaceful and therapeutic. After taking off from Fort Payne and flying north toward Mentone on the west brow of Lookout Mountain you are met with magnificent sights. In a light plane at lower altitudes you get to see and enjoy so many beautiful and interesting things about the area, clear streams, falls, rocks and forests. The lakes and Little River have a peaceful beauty. The Mentone area has all of these and more to enjoy. If you have an opportunity to fly over the area on a clear, sunny day, I think you will see what I am trying to explain. It seems that seeing a bigger picture often says and means more to us. Seeing the whole of a work of art is just better than seeing a small corner of it.

I am not a man of letters or a great theologian, but after viewing the earth and this area from the air, I am even more convinced than ever that all of this did not happen by accident. Simply put, nothing manmade approaches the work of The Almighty.
