Bridging Nature, Art and Science
A Profile of DeSoto State Park Naturalist Brittney Hughes
by Kelly Leavitt

Some of our state's most beautiful woods and waterways are situated within DeSoto State Park's 3,502 acres, and those who live in our area are fortunate to call it their backyard. Boasting scenic waterfalls, an abundance of native wildflowers, and 30 miles of hiking and biking trails, this park is popular among both traveling campers and local neighbors.

Dedicated on May 24, 1939, DeSoto was the fifth state park to be established by the state of Alabama. The last 78 years have seen many changes within the park, and Park Naturalist Brittney Hughes is playing an important part in the park's continuing evolution.

Brittney was raised on Lookout Mountain near Noccalula Falls by a family who loves the outdoors. After her younger brother joined Cub Scouts, her mother became very involved in Boy Scouts and they spent much family time at Camp Comer (where Brittney met her husband, Josh, who is the park's assistant superintendent). “I am told my first visit to DeSoto was when I was three months old. I camped a lot with my parents and my grandparents in the park, as well as in the Smokies,” she said.

She eventually went to college in Birmingham and majored in ornamental horticulture. She found a job she enjoyed during college, but the stresses of city life drove her back to Lookout Mountain. Former park superintendent Tim Whitehead asked Brittney to apply for the open position of park naturalist, and she's glad he did. She began her tenure on May 5, 2005.

According to the State of Alabama's Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Brittney's role as park naturalist calls for “the interpretation of the biological, geological, scenic and historical features of DeSoto State Park.” This fairly broad job description has allowed Brittney to explore creative ways to share the wonders of the park with our local community and with thousands of nature

Letter From The Editor

The new year… the quintessential time for review and renewal. This world is unceasingly amazing to me, with its sheer diversity of cultures, beliefs, and traditions. Did you know that the Kutchi people of India begin their new year with the beginning of the rainy season? Some begin their new year with the winter solstice, and some the vernal equinox. Others begin their new year based on the astrological position of the planets. Historically, there has been an amazing array of “new year” dates.

Since the 16th century, western culture has traditionally begun the new year with the calendar year, on January 1. In our culture, the tradition of making New Year’s resolutions doesn’t seem to be as popular as it once was, presumably because people have wised up to the relative ineffectiveness of such fleeting intentions, which too often reflect our immediate wishes, rather than our most heartfelt commitments. What if, rather than continuing to burden the new year with promises of change, we truly do the work that effectively brings it on?

What if we make deeply seated pledges to change, and then honor our personal responsibility to follow through? Granted, sometimes we need reminding, in spite of our good intentions, because all too often we forget what it is we really want. We fall back into comfort. Granted, sometimes we need reminding, in spite of our good intentions, because all too often we forget what it is we really want. We fall back into patterns. We fall back into comfort. As editor, I have the privilege of access to thirty-plus years’ worth of past Groundhog issues. So, while I haven’t lived in Mentone during all those years, I can learn about the past. I can see what’s endured to the present. And I can be inspired by the devoted efforts of countless Mentonians who, over the last 134 years, have (or purposefully haven’t) effected change. The more I learn about Mentone’s history, the more I know that its history is the key to its future.

Just as I am amazed by the diversity of the world, I am often amazed by the diversity of our community. In this tiny town, we have folks who were born and raised here, folks who live here because their ancestors did, folks who have moved here and found ways to make a living, folks who spend weekends at their vacation homes, and folks who have chosen to retire here. I often muse about how, in many ways, we are a community of hermits, since so many of us love nothing more than spending time in our homes, and on our land. An odd mix comes into play, since we are visited by countless tourists who are drawn to our area’s peacefulness and natural beauty.

Most of us who live here have made a conscious decision to be here, for whatever the reason. It’s this commonality that forges rich community. But, not all of us want change to occur within our town. Or, we want increments of change. Some, however, wish for significant change. It’s no different from our own personal desires for change—some are major, heartfelt, abiding shifts; some are more fleeting; some never happen.

My New Year’s wish for Mentone and the extraordinary people who live here is that, as a community, we continue to find ways to progress the discussion about effectual change. What do we really want? What will most benefit the lives of our residents, especially the children… our future? How will our deepest resolve manifest? I encourage us all to join together in this important, continuing conversation. Happy New Year!

and West River Road. The town’s match will be $37,259, which the water department will fund. This is the second time the town has applied for a grant for this project. Thanks to Lucas Blankenship of TARCOG for preparing the application and steering it through the process. Thanks to Ladd Environmental for preparing the engineering report and to Thad Heinrich of Mentone Water Works for his work in preparing the application.

The bid has been let for constructing the bridge replacement over the West Fork of Little River in Mentone. The low bid was $5,714,487.41 by Wright Brothers Construction Company of Charleston, TN. It was recommended that this bid be awarded, and it is awaiting final approval by Transportation Director John Cooper.

Senator Steve Livingston contacted me last week with some good news for Mentone. The town will receive a Community Development Block Grant for $335,322 to repair the failing water lines on Cutler Avenue.

Well, Here We Go!

by Charlotte Gentry

Here it is, the new year. Old man winter has dug in his toes and does his usual cold, warm, cold, warm dance with us here in the mountains. Holiday decorations are stored away and tax season looms ahead like a dark cloud. Resolutions have been made (and many have already been laid aside) and it’s time to get to work.

The Mentone Business Association’s December meeting at the Mentone Inn was a combination of fellowship and a planning session. We had a very good crowd (including some who had never attended a meeting and others who actually had no idea there even was an MBA until they were invited to the meeting by friends). There was discussion about whether or not the association is even relevant. We believe it is.

What is the MBA, anyway? The short answer is, it’s something like a chamber of commerce. Our goal is to help promote business and to help those businesses that already exist. How do we do that? That is the big question. Businesses in the Mentone area are small “mom and pop” shops and many are open on weekends only. In the winter, some are not open at all.

Is there a need for the MBA? That is another big question. We don’t have a crystal ball to see the future, but we have an expectation that Mentone’s economy is on the upswing. There are folks who are looking to open new businesses here. Having a grass-roots, established business association seems like a wise idea. We can be a viable resource for the economic future in our area.

Our association has potential. It can be strong and vital. That is possible only if we have active members who consider it worthwhile to see strong, growing, thriving businesses in Mentone and the neighboring communities. Business owners, especially, should consider being a part of the MBA. We also welcome those who are simply a part of the community and interested in the business of Mentone.

We have this wintertime lull to plan, get creative, put our heads together and then implement our ideas as opportunities arise in this new year. You are invited to join us for our January meeting at the Green Leaf Grill on Monday, January 8, at 6 p.m.

Get to know us by visiting our Facebook page. We have also created a Mentone Business Association Facebook “Group” where folks can get and get information about goods and services in our area. A list of “Daily Openings” is available on the web at MentoneBusiness.com. There are no dues or fees to belong to MBA and we welcome all business owners and interested folks to join.

Now their handler, Blue Man, is missing. And when Will and Jessica find themselves up against an adversary with superior firepower and a home-court advantage, they’ll be lucky if they make it out alive, with or without Blue Man.

MACC Honors Outstanding Patrons

The Mentone Arts & Cultural Center (MACC) honored several individuals and organizations during its Christmas Appreciation Party at DeSoto Golf Course in Fort Payne on December 5. The party was sponsored by Friends of the Center, a local group of citizens who support the Center’s goals. More than 70 people attended the fun-filled evening.

Each Outstanding Patron selected to be honored has made significant contributions to MACC in the past two years in either monetary or in-kind donations. Outstanding Patrons honored were: Alabama Mountain Lakes Tourist Association; Tillotson-Menlo Charitable Foundation; Alabama State Council on the Arts; Poarch Band of Creek Indians; DeKalb County Community Development Commission (Rep. Nathaniel Ledbetter, Sen. Steve Livingston, Deb Sizemore, Bill Mitchell); Dr. G. Bruce Head, III; Dr. Charles and Barbara Sennett; Carl McCleskey and Betsy Scott; Taylor Theakston; Juergen Beck; Lydia Randolph; Ann Benton; Clay Birchfield; Don David; and Sandra Lafferty. Each Outstanding Patron received a certificate and a painting by artist Lydia Randolph. Presentations were made by Mentone Arts & Cultural Center executive director Randy Grider and Sandra Padgett of Friends of the Center.

Sandra Padgett presents a certificate of appreciation to Sandra Burroughs of the Alabama Mountain Lakes Tourist Association.

Friends of the Center plans to honor wonderful people who have donated to the Center this year. We appreciate EVERYONE who has made a donation in any amount.

We also want to thank Darlene Rotch and Carolyn Nail, who decorated the banquet hall; Erica Wright and Jon Hood, who served as greeter and bartender, respectively; MACC Board President Ray Padgett and other board members who attended and helped Friends of the Center with planning the event; and Marsella Winery for donating a portion of the wine. Kudos also are extended to Corrine West and Shari Lovsey of Plowsshares Bistro for catering the party. The food was beautiful and delicious. And last, but not least, Brenda Johnson for sharing her musical talents.

MACC has been busy in other areas. Sandra Lafferty, who is a nationally acclaimed actor and MACC’s Artist-in-Residence for Theater and Film, and I were guests on Judy Watters’ Morning Blend radio show (WLRH, 89.3 FM) in Huntsville on December 14. The Huntsville public radio host interviewed us about the Center, Sandra’s role in working with area students, and her impressive career.

As we approach some important deadlines concerning construction, we need your help. Your tax-deductible donation will assure we stay on schedule. Remember, donations can be made “in honor” or “in memory” of a family, family member, distinguished citizen, civic group or other. Little River Arts Council News
by Kelly Leavitt

The Little River Arts Council’s board of directors enjoyed a cozy meeting in December at the Mentone Inn. Many thanks to Cynthia Stinson for her gracious hospitality. We recounted our accomplishments this year, took note of the strength of both our membership roll and our finances, and designated several committees as we go forth into another exciting year.

Committee members will address such tasks as: reaching out to artists and others for classes, lectures and the like; researching and applying for grants; organizing LRAC member tours of Manitou Cave; and planning our annual membership meeting, to be held in February. Many thanks to a great team who is dedicated to making sure the arts remain strong in the Little River area.

We are grateful to the Alabama State Council on the Arts for their recent award of a matching grant for the continuation of our “Music for the People” Summer Music Series. The state council especially noted their appreciation of our integration of art and music during last July’s concert, when artist Lydia Randolph helped concert-goers paint pictures during the performance by “Lost in Tyne”. This year, we will offer a variety of art activities during each of the four concerts planned.

Art is important. Visual art, musical art, literary art...all of it. Art makes us think. It makes us look. It makes us listen. Sometimes it makes us laugh. Most often, it is a universal form of communication, erasing boundaries of race, nationality, language, and geography. It reveals our commonalities, as well as our distinctions. It gives us a way to personally express ourselves, and to tap the deep creative root that is within each of us. Much art lasts through the ages, allowing us to feel a connection with those who have created before us.

The Little River Arts Council is dedicated to encouraging individual creativity and broadening community participation, appreciation, and support for the visual, performing, and literary arts. We aim to enrich the quality of life for people in Mentone and neighboring communities by raising funds for the arts; sponsoring events; providing educational opportunities; and strengthening cultural resources for the benefit of all businesses and citizens in the Mentone area. We have some intriguing public art projects in mind for 2018! Visit our web site at littleriverartscouncil.org to learn about our mission, see our calendar of events, and become a member of the Arts Council. You can also find us on Facebook. Your support makes a difference.

Kelly Leavitt is the president of the board of the Little River Arts Council.

Make a Book with Lydia Randolph

January is a great time to let this year’s creative juices start to flow, and with Lydia Randolph’s Book Making class, you’ll have the opportunity to do just that. The Little River Arts Council will host the class on Saturday, January 11, from 1–4 p.m. at Moon Lake Community Library.

Each participant will create a unique book cover, using their own art, magazine clippings, photos...the sky’s the limit. They’ll decorate paper signatures to their personal taste and liking, and then learn how to use waxed thread to stitch the signatures into the cover.

These unique books can be used in a variety of ways. Perhaps you’d like to make an inspirational quotes. Or it could be a journal to write your intentions, ideas, and dreams as we move into a new year.

Lydia is a talented teacher as well as artist, so if you feel creatively “stuck”, she will help you get “un-stuck”. No particular artistic ability is needed for this project. The Little River Arts Council believes that everyone’s an artist!

The cost for the class is $12 for LRAC members, or $20 for non-members (ages 13 and older). Supplies will be provided, but feel welcome to bring your own paper, photos, drawings, old books, cuttings from magazines, ribbon, string, beads, buttons, etc. Pre-registration is required. Email info@littleriverartscouncil.org or visit littleriverartscouncil.org to register.
Sacred Harp Singing School

Have you ever heard of “Sacred Harp” or “shape note” singing? Did you know that DeKalb County is the home of some of the world’s most fascinating a cappella shaped note music? If you are from this county, Sacred Harp singing is your rich heritage. You may have even had a momma or a granddaddy who sang Sacred Harp singing is a proud history to claim and a fun tradition to join.

This form of singing harkens way back and since 1844, when the oblong tune book was first published, many local families have been singing from it. Today, especially if you know anyone related to an Ivey or a Wootten, you may encounter 6th and 7th generation singers who come from an unbroken line of folks who have kept this soul-thrilling music alive. Folks come from all over the country and from around the world to join in with these local singers to learn the old ways and to sing with joy.

You are invited to come learn more about it on Sunday, January 7, from 2-5 p.m., when a singing school will be held at Liberty Baptist Church in Henagar. David Ivey, recipient of the 2013 National Endowment for the Arts fellowship, will lead this informative, fun afternoon. Whether you have other types of musical training or not, you will be able to pick up the basics of this easy-to-learn system.

“Sacred Harp” means several related things. It’s the name of the book we sing from. It also refers to one’s voice, the “sacred harp” from God, and when we get together to sing, we love to preserve the traditions of the culture of Sacred Harp. Today we have camp and occasional singing schools such as this, the main singing school for the year.

Music. This allows each part to be more of an independent melody, with the flexibility of the lower parts to occasionally soar above the higher parts. The music is written to be sung, not adapted.

Singers sit in what is known as “the hollow square,” facing each other in four-part harmony. It is never performed; there are no practices or auditions. Singing doesn’t cost anything. Loaner books are almost always available, although if you want to buy a book they cost $20. One delightful feature of Sacred Harp singing is that everyone who comes is offered the opportunity to lead their own song. In general, each song is led by another member of the class so, from toddlers to tottering elders, everyone is included. This keeps the energy fresh and insures that no singing is ever like any other. The way children are treated within Sacred Harp makes it very attractive for parents and grandparents to involve their kids. Children are encouraged to participate as fully as adults and are given much focus and attention when they lead. For a child to command an entire room full of people in an authentic leadership role is priceless and both boys and girls are afforded respect and opportunity.

Sacred Harp songs come in major and minor, are slow or fast, and use all the notes (but just call them something different). There are no instruments used except for the human voice. Although the key for each tune is clearly printed, a skilled pitcher will consider the class assembled, the time of day, and other factors when choosing the relative pitch of the song, placing it so the highs and lows of each song aren’t outside the capability of those assembled and hopefully just in the right spot to make each song sound

Your Golden Ticket for Exciting Things in 2018

by Kelly Leavitt

“I have found the most valuable thing in my wallet is my library card.”—Laura Bush

Library cards are like golden tickets. They give us access to age-old ideas, to fanciful stories, to inspiring memoirs, and to human history. The wealth of information on the internet is astounding. When we hold a book, though, worlds are in our hands. Humans have long honored the connection between hand, head, and heart, and reading a book—on any topic—honors that connection, as well.

In fact, we're so grateful for library cards that we at Moon Lake Community Library invite you to come by during open hours this month and show your library card to receive a free book of your choice from our sale shelves. If you don't yet have a library card, it only takes a few minutes to apply. There is no charge for a card, and patrons may borrow books for two weeks and DVDs for one week. We have thousands of books on our shelves, and almost a thousand DVDs.

We're starting something new and fun in January. When you borrow a book, you'll receive a bookmark with five stars on it. When you've finished the book, you can fill in the stars to show how well you liked the book, and then leave the bookmark in the book for the next person who's interested in it. We'll also have review cards available, so if you want to share something about a book you've read or a movie you've seen from our collection, you can post the card for others to see. We have a special section for books that have been recommended by community members.

Saturdays have been popular with folks of all ages who come to play games. The chess players are gearing up for a tournament we'll be having in the spring. One recent Saturday, a group was playing Mexican Train dominoes, and, honestly, I didn't know dominoes could be so fun. Laughter filled the air. If you enjoy games of strategy, please join us on Saturdays between 10 a.m. and noon. We have chess, backgammon, cribbage, dominoes, playing cards, and Rubik's Cube.

Another change in 2018 is that we'll be serving organic coffee on Saturday mornings on a donation basis, with soft music playing in the background. Moon Lake Community Library is your library, and we want you to feel as comfortable there as you are at home. To that end, we plan to add a seating area for anyone who wants to sit and read, or speak quietly with a friend. We'll soon be on the search for two easy chairs and a small coffee table. We welcome any contributions to this cause, whether it be in the form of money or actual furniture.

The library is open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3-5 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m.-12 p.m. A board policy is that a volunteer always be present when the librarian is on duty, both for safety reasons and to be able to offer assistance. Volunteers are trained to check books and movies in and out, to re-shelve them, and to answer any questions patrons may have. We appreciate our current volunteers—Brandy Barrett, Jane Faile, Dianne Gilbreath, Dianne Kuehl, Mickey Luck, Kathy Norrell, Pat Peterson, Rhea Pirch, Rita Shirley, Pat Schoen, and Dianne Tindoll—and we welcome new volunteers. (If we had enough volunteers, it's even possible the library could expand the number of days we're open.) Let us know if you're interested or have any questions.

The board welcomes ideas for any classes, lectures or workshops you might be interested in having the library host. Email moonlakecommunitylibrary@yahoo.com with your suggestions. We look forward to offering some interesting opportunities throughout the coming year. Visit our Facebook page to stay up-to-date with news and announcements.

Sacred Harp offers a lifetime of singing and learning. Once you master the shapes and the rudiments and learn “your” part, there are still three more parts you could learn to sing, aspects of singing like accent or the poetry that you can just right.

Sacred Harp Singing School will cover the basics of the tradition and give a simple introduction to the modes of time and other rudimentary aspects of Sacred Harp. The adult-focused camp is at Camp Lee and other rudimentary aspects of Sacred Harp. Each year in Alabama, there are two sessions of Camp FASOLA, a 4-day singing school in a fun camp atmosphere. Check out more at campfasola.org. One session in Anniston at Camp Lee puts its focus on kids. Lots of fun outdoor “camp” activities are included with daily singing and instruction. The adult-focused camp is at Camp McDowell, near Jasper. Local singings within a short drive are plentiful throughout much of the year. Find out where you can catch a Sacred Harp singing at fasola.org/Singings, then click on Red Book—it's the 1991 Denson revision (partially compiled by our singing school master, David Ivey) that we mostly sing from.

Nestled in the woods atop Lookout Mountain, near Mentone, Alabama, this quaint little chapel is surrounded by ferns, forest and flowers. The chapel is a scaled version of traditional Appalachian churches of days gone by. Stained glass windows filtering soft forest sunrays and soft organ music accent an ambience fitting the wedding ceremony. Inside, wooden pews will seat approximately 60 guests.

Linda Patterson, owner of the chapel, said the idea for it began with a bell, and now that bell rings as newlyweds exit the door of the chapel.

Joy to the World! What a great end to 2017 in the world of MERF. The Christmas party and lunch was a great celebration. Cute and talented elves, who may have been K-3 Moon Lake students, pranced into the Moon Lake Baptist fellowship hall and sang their hearts out. Sunglasses, jingle bells and energetic singers made a joyful noise! And Santa took time out of his busy schedule to join us and delight both the big and little kids. Thanks to John Bares and the Mentone Community Church for providing a fabulous meal and Doug Kiker and Ms. Paula for entertaining us. Lunches couldn’t happen without the wonderful kitchen elves who help every

Our other delicious meals this fall were provided by Camp Laney, Alpine Camp for Boys, Mentone Market, St. Joseph’s Episcopal Church, the Rhododendron Garden Club, and the Green Leaf Grill.

Congratulations to the MERF Spring scholarship recipients. The Sue McLaurin Henry Scholarship was established in memory of Sue, who was one of a group of several Mentone residents who envisioned and established MERF over 24 years ago. Sue strongly believed in the value of education for lifelong learning, as well as offering opportunities to be successful and effective citizens. The committee awarded Sarah Blalock, Josie Crider, Kara Goss, Angela Hadley, Devin Leps, Brooke Moore, and August Shanklin with funds to help with school expenses at Jacksonville State University, Northeast Alabama Community College and University of North Alabama this spring. MERF looks forward to seeing these future teachers, nurses, business leaders and anesthesiologists make a difference in our community. A record number of scholarship applications were received this year, so some deserving students were not able to receive help due to limited funds. Unless specified for other means, memorial checks sent to MERF are deposited in the scholarship fund.

matching grant from the Alabama State Council on the Arts, Moon Lake Elementary School’s 4th, 5th, and 6th graders were able to see the Alliance Theater’s production in Atlanta. Since the students had performed their own show two nights before, it was fun for them to hear the professional actors saying their lines and debating who the better performer was! The special effects were amazing, so the next Moon Lake production might have some characters flying or being raised out of the floor (just kidding, Mrs. Lance). The students were on the edge of their seats watching. Some great comments were, “I could do this every day!”, “I’m going to learn how to do that!”, and “It was amazing!” Thanks to Ms. Paula Easter for preparing the students well to get so much out of every experience and for putting on a fabulous school play on December 12. The trip was topped off with lunch at the Varsity (“What’ll you have, what you’ll have?”), with an anonymous donor treating all the students to their meals.

MERF is so grateful to be able to provide wonderful experiences such as the scholarships, field trips and lunches to the Moon Lake students, teachers, their families, and the community. Thank you to all who stepped up in 2017 financially and with the gift of your time to enrich the learning and living in our community. MERF could not do what it does without you. MERF is more than grateful to MAPA for seeing the importance of our beloved MERF house. MERF has received a $5000 grant from MAPA to assist with funds to repair and renovate the house. Here’s to a great New Year!

Cub Scouts Receive Donation from MAPA

by Anna Mae Horn

With a goal of having a den available for every child, local Cubmaster Greg Carreker is expanding local Cub Scout Pack 106. Three years ago, Weeblos was added for fourth and fifth graders; it’s been a success. Now, the pack will be available even to kindergarten students.

Boy Scouts of America does not have geographical boundaries, so anyone can join Pack 106 even though it is identified as the “Mentone” group. Additionally, beginning this month, Cub Scouts are also open to girls. This means that any child of elementary school age is welcome to join.

You have probably seen the older scouts from Boy Scout Troop 106 around town doing various service projects and parking cars at the annual MAPA festivals. The younger Weeblos assist in appropriate projects and help with school events.

Over the years, Boy Scouts have impacted the area in tremendous ways; with the completed expansion of the Cub Scout program, the next generation will as well.

Of course, an expansion of the pack creates a financial need for various materials for the members and their service projects. In December, MAPA gladly donated $1,000 to help renew the Cub Scout program. Some scholarships are available based on need. This helps make Cub Scouts available to more children.

The Cub Scout program teaches important characteristics. Cub Scouts learn to be good citizens and assets to their community; they do fun projects, go on great adventures, and learn valuable lessons. If you have a child interested in Cub Scouts, please contact Cubmaster Greg Carreker at 256-899-2927.
All of a sudden, fall was here, and I had a BIG decision to make—what were my Moon Lake students going to present for their annual Christmas musical? Time was ticking…music had to be ordered, costumes figured out and found, music and lines to be learned…whew, the list was long and getting longer. I knew in my heart what I wanted (secretly) to do for several years now, but…? As I looked in the mirror I thought, “Seriously, are you really going to try and do ‘A Christmas Carol’ with your students this year?” My next thought was even more daunting; how in the world do I take these 21st century technology-driven marvels back to 19th century England? Mount Everest seemed to be looming in my future—the climb! Lucky for me, I found music that I knew would catch the “spirit” in which I wanted to share this timeless classic. Once I had indulged and bought the books and CD, there was no going back—the climb was now upon me.

Why I ever thought that there would be issues with my sweet kiddos, I don’t know. They remind me over and over again how well they can adapt to all kinds of situations (including very different styles of music) but I was kind of sneaky: the first song they learned was a very upbeat song that relayed one of the main messages of the story—“The Spirit’s Gonna Get Ya”—and it certainly did for them and Ebenezer Scrooge. A really nice surprise for me was the fact that several of my students knew the story, some had watched a movie version, and all were really excited about the performance.

There were many really funny experiences as we talked about the dialogue and vocabulary used in the script and musical. A favorite phrase for everyone became “Bah Humbug” and it also became one of their favorite songs in the musical. I often had to remind them that Scrooge would be singing that in our play, but that during practice they could sing along, as they did to the top of their voices. Could a teacher be more proud of her students and all they achieved with performing this play? I want to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of my Moon Lake students for an incredible job. Bravo!

A word about our Ebenezer Scrooge. I had the privilege of teaching Logan Bloyer here at Moon Lake, and after he graduated I continued to follow his efforts in drama at Fort Payne. He was always one of those students who was excited to be a part of the plays we did during his years here at Moon Lake. Logan was awarded a theater performance scholarship to Northeast Community College, where he is now continuing his study of the theater and performance. It was a joy to have him return and play Ebenezer Scrooge in our Moon Lake production of “A Christmas Carol.” What I loved even more were his “pep” talks to all of the students, and how he was always willing to answer a question, offer a suggestion, and just be a really great mentor for all of my students. I was really glad he said “Yes” when I asked him if he would be interested.

Charles Dickens’ “A Christmas Carol” has been a favorite of mine for many years. You might wonder why I would want to spend time with someone like Ebenezer Scrooge and introduce my students to this story. One reason I love to return again and again to “A Christmas Carol” is because it leaves me with one of the most powerful messages of hope in all of literature. If a miserly, mean, sour and cruel old man like Scrooge can change, there is hope that anyone can change. If performing this musical teaches my sweet kiddos anything, it will be a message that never grows old—that one is always capable of change, no matter what your age or what you have experienced, even in their young lives.

May 2018 be a year filled with heart-felt laughter, hope and goodness for you all.

Greek Veggie Pitas
by Dowe Foreman

Freeze 1 lb. water-packed, extra-firm tofu (such as NaSoya) overnight, thaw, rinse and drain. Squeeze moisture out with hands, then place between flat-weave towels (like a flour sack) and squeeze until most of the moisture is gone. Cut into small cubes. Place in large bowl.

Add:
2 cups broccoli, cut in small pieces
1 cup red onion, thinly sliced
3 cloves garlic, finely minced

In a smaller bowl, combine:
½ cup olive oil
3 Tbs. lemon juice
1 ½ Tbs. sweet basil
1 Tbs. oregano
1 ½ tsp. salt
Mix thoroughly, then pour over salad and toss. Chill overnight.

Before serving, add:
2 cups chopped Roma tomatoes
½ can green ripe olives
½ cup crumbled Feta cheese
1 pack whole wheat pitas
Cut pitas in half, toast lightly, open pita (so it won't close as it cools) and fill with salad. Enjoy!

Pecan Cheese Balls
submitted by Dianne Kuehl
Serves 18–20

12 oz. cream cheese, softened
1 cup cheddar cheese, shredded
8 slices bacon, cooked & finely chopped
1 ½ cup fresh chives, finely chopped
1 ½ cup pecans, finely chopped
1 tsp. garlic powder (or to taste)
1 tsp. paprika
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
Pretzel sticks

Mix softened cream cheese and cheddar cheese together with garlic powder and paprika. Season with salt and pepper. Form 1-inch balls and refrigerate until firm (about an hour).

In a shallow bowl, stir together bacon, chives and pecans. Roll cheese balls in mixture, insert a pretzel stick in each ball, and serve.

If not serving right away, loosely cover with plastic and return to fridge. Let sit at room temperature 15 minutes before serving.

Legal Beer and Wine Comes to Mentone
by Holley Midgley

This is a pop quiz. Which of the following is true:
1) In 2018, the United States will become a province of Canada, or
2) Bulgaria will become the 51st state, or
3) It is legal to serve beer and wine in Mentone’s restaurants which have applied for, and received, the appropriate license.

If you picked anything but number 3, maybe you didn’t read the headline of this story. It’s true! Belly up to the bar friends, ‘cause it is now legal to plop yourself in a seat, order a meal, and order something to go and leave. Now don’t just come in and grab a beer. It’s been a good, positive experience,” says Tom,” every bar stool was already taken.”

Initially, there was a kind of shake down period where the Emorys had to figure out how to do this thing efficiently. That break-in period has passed and now things are running as smooth as a fine pilsner beer. How eager was the community? The store was slated to begin sales at 5:00 p.m. on November 3rd. “But by 4 o’clock,” says Tom,” every bar stool was already taken.”

Tom has been pleased with the lack of problems the new situation has created. “Just like Mentone is nice,” he says, “so are the customers. They come from all walks of life, and they behave themselves. We’re seeing a lot of families come in, and since we know virtually everybody here, it’s comfortable. And people who used to have to drive to Fort Payne and back now know they don’t have to.”

Many will recall that the old Mentone Market burned to the ground back on the day before Thanksgiving, 2016. The long process of rebuilding was finally completed, and the Market reopened this past July with a new look, a bigger kitchen, and the prospect of serving alcohol as soon as the new rules were put into place.

Dianne Kuehl served her delicious pecan cheese balls at the library’s open house in December, and many asked for the recipe. Here it is!

SAGE ADVICE: THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

by Susan Seago

Winter is the perfect time to plan or plant a looking glass vignette. Yes, as long as the ground is not frozen, planting can be done. So, sit in your living room or another favorite spot in your home where you spend time during the cool weather months. You may have a big window, glass door, screen porch, or other much-used area from which to view the winter scene. Then, determine what kind of evergreen plants you would like to see in your “picture frame”.

Do you want a fall- or winter-blooming camellia with red, pink, or white flowers? A majestic evergreen, perhaps a “Little Gem” Magnolia, looks especially pretty when snow falls. In the summer, it produces fragrant white flowers. Birds that overwinter love evergreens for nesting and shelter, especially hollies. A bird feeder placed nearby can provide food along with the holly berries. And, if you want to enjoy the outside on a sunny day, add a bench for watching the birds.

An evergreen’s needles or shiny leaves can provide a variety of colors. Some are dark or light green; others are blue-green, variegated green and yellow, maybe even variegated green and white. This combination makes for an interesting assortment of textures. You might add rocks or a perennial such as the Hellebore (Lenten Rose), which blooms through early spring and looks great combined with the winter red of ‘Firepower’ nandina or low-growing junipers. Grasses add movement in the landscape, as well as a beautiful tan contrast to the green. To complete the scene, plant some pansies and kale or cabbage to add even more color through the winter. A good layer of mulch will help retain moisture and act as a backdrop for the plants and shrubs.

There is pleasure in watching the squirrels, deer, and birds romp in the winter air in the scenic landscape of your yard. Stay warm and enjoy the season.
WANTED: Listings! 2017 was a very good year for sales. If you've been considering selling, now is the time to let us help you get your property SOLD!
Got recycling? You probably do, even though you may think it’s trash. The Alabama Department of Environmental Management estimates that, statewide, Alabamians recycle about eight percent of the trash generated each day. That leaves a lot of waste destined for the landfill. We in the Mentone area are fortunate to have two recycling centers available to us.

The Town of Mentone furnishes recycling containers behind Town Hall. Pre-sorted white copy paper, newspapers, and cardboard can be deposited Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m., and Saturday between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. For more information about Mentone’s recycling program, call 256-634-4444.

Fort Payne has an impressive recycling center located at 406 Logan Street SE (in a neighborhood near the post office). The facility is open 24 hours; an attendant is on site Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

According to fortpayne.org, the facility accepts the following items:
• Clean, washed aluminum cans
• Mixed metal, including clean washed food cans. No fence wire is accepted.
• Used motor oil
• Used automobile batteries
• Styrofoam peanuts
• Narrow necked #2 HDPE plastic bottles, such as milk jugs and shampoo bottles
• Narrow necked #1 PET plastic bottles, such as soda and water bottles
• Shrink wrap plastic and plastic grocery store bags
• All glass products
• Cardboard boxes, broken down flat
• Clean white office paper and computer paper, shredded or not shredded
• All other mixed paper products.

For more information about Fort Payne’s recycling center, call 256-845-8977.

SENIOR HEALTH: MEDICARE AND VACCINE COVERAGE

by Lynn Hixson

Medicare Part B and Medicare Part D cover outpatient drugs differently. It depends on the drug, where you receive it, and whether you are in Original Medicare or have a Medicare Advantage Plan. Understanding how Medicare covers drugs can help you address denials and avoid unnecessary expenses.

You can get Medicare prescription drug coverage through a Part D stand-alone prescription drug plan or through a Medicare Advantage Plan that includes prescription drug coverage. The Part B benefit also covers certain prescriptions. You have the Part B benefit regardless of whether you have Original Medicare or a Medicare Advantage Plan.

Most outpatient prescription drugs are covered under Part D, as long as they’re on your plan’s formulary, which is the list of drugs they cover. Certain outpatient drugs are covered by Part B, however. For example, Part B should cover your flu shot. Antigens—a type of prescription drug often used to treat allergies—are also covered by Part B, not Part D. The general rule is that Part B covers drugs that usually can’t be self-administered, meaning you need a provider’s help to take or inject them. Part B also covers a limited number of prescriptions from the pharmacy (mainly oral anti-cancer drugs).

Some drugs may be covered by either Part B or by Part D, depending on the situation. For example, if you use an insulin pump, you probably get your insulin and pump from a durable medical equipment supplier, and Part B will cover it. If you inject insulin using a needle, Part D will cover it. If you are a hospital outpatient, Part B should cover all medications that relate to the reason for your hospital visit; however, Part D will cover medication that you administer yourself and do not relate to the hospital visit.

Your pharmacist, your provider, or your plan (when applicable) can help you understand your prescription coverage. For objective counseling and assistance, you can also contact your State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP) coordinator, who can explain which part of Medicare should cover your drugs, depending upon your circumstances. If you have any questions or need assistance, please call Lynn Hixon at the DeKalb County Council on Aging at 256-845-8590.

lovers from around the world who visit the park each year.

Brittney developed the “Serious Skills” series of free classes and workshops aimed at personal enrichment. Classes are open to local residents, overnight park guests and day visitors. “Flying Fishing for Beginners”, “Dutch Oven Campfire Cooking”; and a mosaic glass bench project were some of the offerings in 2017. “I don’t like to charge for programs,” Brittney explained. “Let’s face it. We’re in a rural area; $10 may be a lot to pay. But sometimes I do have to charge for supplies.” To that end, Brittney has begun successfully writing and receiving grants, with the help of park partners.

This year, the park received a Stringfellow Health grant from the Northeast Alabama Community Foundation and the Conservation Education Institute that funded the “Forest and Field” series that Brittney developed. Programs in 2017 included: “Journal Journey”; “Sound Mapping”; “Enchanted Botany Hike”; the always-popular “Fairy Houses and Observation Hike”; and a series of “Yoga Hikes”.

Brittney is passionate about incorporating art and science into the nature programs she develops. The Stringfellow grant provided for the purchase of 10 hammocks and 10 backpacks filled with art supplies, including watercolor pencils and paints, wax pastels, and paper. Working with artist Starr Weems during the “Journal Journey” program, participants used the art supplies to reflect their observations of nature, using their own journaling style. Guests were invited to hang in a hammock during the “Sound Mapping” program, and use the art supplies to create a sound map of the sounds they heard in the forest. “The grant also allows me to hire artists to lead our programs, and I like that we can support them that way,” said Brittney.

Brittney’s interest in art led her to the Little River Arts Council, which she approached in 2015 for support in implementing her idea of the “Creative Spirit Market.” For the last two years, the park and the arts council have co-hosted this November event, which is held at the park and features artist demonstrations and an outdoor market of hand-crafted items and original artwork. Her involvement led to an invitation to join the board of directors of the arts council.

DeSoto State Park also maintains a working partnership with the National Park Service, JSU Field Schools, One World Adventure Company, and Seven Pines Survival. As a result, in 2017 the park and its partners hosted 120 programs, serving 6,889 people.

When park superintendent Ken Thomas began his career as the park’s naturalist in the spring of 1992, he developed “Campfire Talks”, a program which Brittney has sustained and continues to develop, with the help of many guest speakers. Campfire Talks are a series of free educational and entertaining programs held on many Friday and Saturday evenings in the months of May through October. Generally science-oriented, some recent topics have included: “Voices of the Night”; “Butterflies of Alabama”; “Invisible Wonders of Little River”; and “The History of Moonshine”. These talks are held at the campfire ring at the improved campground; they are sometimes augmented with photo slide shows.

“Wildflower Saturday” is another park tradition that Brittney has particularly enjoyed carrying on, given her own love for native wildflowers. This program began 26 years ago and is held on the first Saturday in May. A total of nine walking tours along three different trails are led by a variety of guides who are able to locate and identify many of the more than 100 native plant species in the park. In addition, informative programs are hosted in the lodge on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Programs and classes are also held throughout the year in the park’s Benefield Interpretive Center and the Conservation Education Institute.

(popularly referred to as “the nature center”), which Brittney manages. Located near the Country Store, the center showcases the diversity of mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians which are found in the park.

The park has long held events for Halloween, but since it is Brittney’s favorite holiday, in 2007 she created “Spookapalooza”, a weekend-long program that offers themed activities, including pumpkin carving, trick-or-treating, and educational programs for park guests and local residents alike. In 2017, she estimates 1,100 people attended the event.

In addition to her naturalist duties, Brittney has become known for her impressive talent in basket weaving. “In 2010, I learned how to weave baskets,” she said. “I first learned pine needle basketry, called ‘coiling’. It’s the same technique they use on the coast of Georgia with the sweetwater grass baskets. A year ago, I started learning reed work and I’m currently learning chair caning.” Brittney will be teaching several basketry classes in 2018.

Brittney’s horticulture background has proven valuable in a unique project at the park: propagating Green Pitcher Plants (Sarracenia oreophila). “They’re a rare, endangered, carnivorous plant that’s only found in five counties in Alabama, one county in Georgia, and one county in North Carolina. We’re talking about populations of about 50 plants in each population,” said Brittney. “The world’s biggest population of this species is in DeSoto State Park and Little River Canyon National Preserve.”

Park Headquarters currently houses about 200 Green Pitcher Plants. “The Canyon protects them, as we do. But since they’re a National Preserve, they have some restrictions that we don’t have,” Brittney said. “That’s why we’re able to propagate them. This is the fifth year we’ve collected seeds. We’ve worked with the US Fish and Wildlife Service, as well as the Atlanta Botanical Garden, on how to properly take care of the plants.” The seeds need a certain kind of condition and it can take a few years for them to germinate in the wild. Brittney explained that “once we learned how to do it, it’s been easier than we anticipated. After we collect them, they go in the refrigerator for six weeks, which makes their cold stratification for the winter. We sow them out, and then put them in their individual pots.” The only problem? “We’ve run out of room,” said Brittney. “I have seeds sitting on my desk, waiting to go in the refrigerator.”

Fortunately, that wait won’t be too long. The park will soon purchase a greenhouse with funding from a newly-organized group of supporters—Friends of DeSoto State Park, a small group that was founded with a bequest by a private donor and is working to raise funds for the park. “Many state parks aren’t really tied in to their local community,” Brittney said. “We’re really lucky to be so well supported by residents of Mentone and Fort Payne.”

Brittney is a young woman who has evidently found work that she loves. We all benefit from her enormous dedication.

In 2013, DeSoto State Park engaged in a conservation project to help protect, preserve, and educate about the carnivorous Green Pitcher Plant of Alabama. One phase of the Pitcher Plant Project was completed with the help of Dan Grogan and his students of the Ft. Payne High School Agriculture program. Over the course of several work days, DSP staff members and students cleared the brush that shaded the Green Pitcher Plant bog and helped to prepare the area for a prescribed burn that took place a few weeks later.

While the bog where the plant grows wild is protected and maintained, staff members wanted to create an exhibit to display these plants to the public. Boy Scout Austin Evans teamed up with DeSoto State Park to plan and implement a public display of pitcher plants to count as Evans’ Eagle Scout Project. Ron Determann of the Atlanta Botanical Gardens offered his expert knowledge and provided the Green Pitcher Plants for use in the display. The Green Pitcher Plant exhibit area can be viewed in DeSoto State Park at the Country Store.

These two-month old seedlings will soon be separated into small square pots and then nurtured until at least three years of age, when they are planted back into the park.

In the bog, the adult summer pitchers catch the prey with what are known as “pitfall traps”. At the end of summer, these structures fall over and are decomposed into the ground.

In 2013, Austin Evans’ Boy Scout Eagle project involved transforming an existing plant bed into a bog, so now people can use the growth of the Green Pitcher Plant. L. to R: Ron Determann, Atlanta Botanical Gardens; Austin Evans; and Ken Thomas, DSP Park Superintendent.
